

FIRE MARSHAL SUSPENDED FOR INTOXICATION AS MAYOR DEMANDS PURGE OF DRINKERS

George Nominated For White House By Editor Melton

Nationally Known Legionnaire Starts 1940 Boom With Prophecy, 'This Is Georgia's Opportunity.'

BEST MAN FOR JOB, EDITORIAL STATES

Griffin Leader Points Out Senator Was Second to Al Smith in 1928 Race.

Quimby Melton, editor of the Griffin Daily News and a nationally known figure in American Legion affairs, today will publish an editorial nominating Senator George as the Democratic party's presidential candidate in 1940.

Senator George was placed in nomination at Houston in 1928 when the Al Smith bloc swept the nomination for the then "Happy Warrior" on the first ballot. The late Charles R. Crisp nominated Senator George and he received all the votes from the Florida and Georgia delegations and enough votes from Alabama and West Virginia to make him second to Smith.

Pointing out that the more people become acquainted with Senator George's record of courage and adherence to the best principles of democracy, the more they admire and respect him, Editor Melton marshals a formidable list of arguments in behalf of the senior senator.

In an interview yesterday afternoon Editor Melton said: "I believe that Georgia has an excellent chance in 1940 to win either the presidency or the vice presidency. The first step in that, of course, is to re-elect Senator George."

"Senator George has shown that independence of mind and character which the people of Georgia expect from their senator. They do not elect a man and expect him to be a 'yes' man or to go to Washington with his hands tied. He has proved entirely loyal to the proven principles of democracy and the people will need a man such as he to lead the fight in 1940. He was a national figure in 1928 when he was second to Al Smith in the Houston convention. He is an even greater and more respected public figure today."

The Editorial.
The Griffin News editorial will appear as follows:
"In 1940 the Democratic party must nominate a president and vice president."

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Vice President John Nance Garner will have completed two terms (eight years) as head of our national government. "Naturally the Democratic party will want to nominate men who can be elected and carry out the principles of democratic government."

"Despite the sweeping victories of our nominees in 1932 and again in 1936, a bitter fight will be waged in the national election in an effort to return the nation to the hands of the Republicans."

ENGLAND BLUNTLY WARNS JAPANESE ON RIGHTS IN CHINA

Foreign Secretary Halifax Discloses Cabinet Is Considering 'Action' To Protect Her Interests.

DEFINING BORDER SOUGHT BY TOKYO

Sudetens Reject Praha's Terms for Settlement, Call Offer a 'Swindle.'

LONDON, July 27.—(P)—Britain's Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax warned Japan tonight Britain intends to protect her century-old interests in China.

Addressing the house of lords in a broad survey of the troublesome problems facing the government, Lord Halifax used much blunter language about Japan than Prime Minister Chamberlain did in the house of commons yesterday.

He said Britain was considering "possible action" if Japan failed to respect British interests in China. "We are quite ready," Lord Halifax said, "to consider and already are considering possible action open to us if we do not secure adequate consideration for interests we have a right to protect."

The foreign secretary appealed for international sincerity on other scattered fronts endangering world peace—particularly in the case of Czechoslovakia.

Quite frankly he admitted the Czechoslovak problem was going to take a "genius" to solve.

Lord Halifax dedicated Britain to work for removal of the "nightmare of fear" hanging over Europe, and he decried as "stupid and useless the arbitrament of war."

Lord Halifax mentioned the strong bonds uniting Britain and France and had a word also to say about Italian restlessness due to the delay in putting into effect the Anglo-Italian friendship agreement of April 16 which depends upon a "settlement" of the Spanish war.

"I see no reason why such delay as is inevitable should mar the understanding which it was the principal purpose of the agreement to restore," he said.

The foreign secretary regretted the failure of the Anglo-Italian agreement to produce improved relations between Italy and France, which he said was a necessary complement.

He denied Britain's pact with

Dies of Heart Ailment

DR. HERTY, 71, DIES OF HEART AILMENT

Famous Little Scientist Developed Process for Making Pine Newsprint.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 27.—(P)—Dr. Charles H. Herty, soft-spoken scientist whose development of a process for making newsprint from slash pine started a new southern industry, died in a hospital here today of a heart ailment. He was 71.

Although he had been under treatment about three weeks, his death was unexpected. Only a half hour before Dr. Herty's death friends had been advised by the hospital that he had spent a good night.

The famed, energetic little chemist died in the city where he had established his laboratories and an experimental wood pulp and paper plant in 1931.

It was estimated that approximately $100,000,000 has been invested in southern paper mills in recent years due to Dr. Herty's work.

The body of Dr. Herty will lie in state at the chapel of Hendersson Brothers until 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, at which time it will be moved to St. John's Episcopal church. The body will lie in state at the church until 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night, when the Rev. Ernest Risley, rector, will conduct funeral services.

Burial To Be Private.

The body will be taken then to Macon to be cremated, according to the request of the eminent industrial chemist. Burial will be private. It is announced by relatives tonight that the place of burial will not be definitely known until tomorrow afternoon about 5:30 o'clock, but it will be either in Athens or Macon.

The active pallbearers will be Dr. Charles Carpenter, Savannah; George Ritter, Savannah; William Allen, Atlanta; Frank Heyward Jr., state forester, Atlanta; Elliott W. Reed, Savannah; and Walter L. Hendricks, Savannah.

Honorary pallbearers will be James Stahlman, Nashville, Tenn.; William T. Anderson, Macon; John Paschall, Atlanta; A. K. Sessoms, Coddell, Ga.; Judge A. B. Lovett, Thomas, Ga.; James Mallory, J. F. Jackson, Jack D. McCarty, J. M. Allen, Judge Gordon Saussy, J. J. Cornell, Herschel V. Jenkins, Richard M. Charlton, all of Savannah; W. D. Anderson, Macon; Judge Ogdin Persons, W. E. Curtis, chairman industrial committee of Savannah; Henry Blum, vice president Savannah Port Authority; Colonel G. A. Gordon, Savannah, chairman of Cosmos Club; W. G. Suttive, president Savannah Chamber of Commerce; J. Sullivan Bond, senior warden St. John's church, Savannah, the members of the Century Club of New York, of the Herty Foundation, of the American Chemical Society, of the Chemical Foundation, Inc., of the board of regents of the University of Georgia, of the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina.

The Georgia action was taken in Lowndes county superior court, with Judge W. E. Thomas signing a temporary order and setting a hearing at Valdosta on August 6 on the petition for a permanent injunction.

Circuit Judge Harold W. Adams, of Lake City, Fla., announced he has granted a restraining order for Florida growers seeking the same relief from penalties.

In the meantime, all penalties collected for sales in excess of quotas are to be impounded and held subject to final adjudication of the legal battle.

Little announced the order would not affect growers not already parties to the petition for injunction, but it was added that any grower might intervene and become a party.

Preparations Not Seriously Ruffled by Attack on Marketing Regulations in Georgia, Florida

AIR OF OPTIMISM PERVADES BELT

George Demands Suspension of Allotments as U. S. Sees Price Drop.

By HERMAN HANCOCK, Constitution Staff Writer.

VALDOSTA, Ga., July 27.—Speculation concerning whether the court battle launched today to avoid AAA tobacco quota penalties will be successful tonight failed to seriously disturb preparations for the first cries of auctioneers at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, when the 15 markets of Georgia open for sale of the 1938 crop.

In an injunction suit filed today, 500 Georgia and Florida tobacco growers won a temporary injunction against collection of penalties under the AAA act of 1938. They contend they have a right to market their entire crop, estimated at from 90,000,000 to 100,000,000 pounds, instead of being restricted to the 76,000,000 pounds quota set by AAA.

$4,500,000 Involved.

A. J. Little, one of the attorneys for the growers, announced the Georgia and Florida growers would have to pay penalties totaling about $4,500,000 if the act is upheld.

Last-minute preparations were rushed to conclusion. Crowds of growers and their families milled about warehouses in every one of the markets. Buyers were snatching hours of sleep and making ready for the mad rush of the next few days, when it is believed the bulk of Georgia's bumper crop will pass through the warehouses.

Buzz of Carnival.

Auctioneers were brushing up on their bidding chants, unintelligible to the uninitiated. All the buzz of a carnival was present and, in fact, in several of the towns in this area, carnivals have been set up for the entertainment of large crowds, who annually pack cities in which markets are located.

There was, however, considerable conjecture among those versed in agricultural matters as to the effect a successful resistance of tobacco penalties might have on other commodities. There were those who contended other agricultural products would not be affected and quota limitations could be enforced.

There were others, however, who appeared to be just as conversant with the law and its application, who argued that if AAA is broken down in tobacco, it will be regarded as a precedent and that it will become ineffective in its entirety.

The petitioners in today's injunction action attacked the act as unconstitutional, and are prepared to take the issue to the supreme court of the United States, leaders here said.

BAR ATTACKS NLRB AND SECURITY ACT

Partisans of One Class Pitted Against Other, Committee Charges.

CLEVELAND, July 27.—(P)—A committee of the American Bar Association described the New Deal's social security act as "indefinitely drawn" tonight and said the National Labor Relations Board and its subsidiary boards "must be regarded as the partisans of one class as against the other and the result must be to intensify class antagonism."

The committee on labor, employment and social security in its report said the labor act is "the deliberate embodiment of a new social policy," in which the government "has departed from the traditional role of mediator and arbitrator."

The house of delegates failed to complete its agenda today and presentation of the report was delayed until tomorrow along with the controversial conclusions of the committee on administrative law, which were attacked by Commissioner Jerome N. Frank, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, as "defamatory."

Frank has asked that the committee withdraw what he described as a "slur" on Chairman William O. Douglas, of the SEC. The labor committee said the labor's procedure "is such that it cannot command the confidence of the public."

ANOTHER FIREMAN ADMITS DRINKING AND GIVES UP POST

Marshal M. H. Carter Is Taken Off Duty for 60 Days After Mayor Moves for Discharge.

BOARD WRANGLES OVER SUSPENSION

Plan to Demote Officer Is Charged by Hailey and Alderman Bridges.

Drinking firemen were condemned last night by Mayor Hartsfield at a meeting of the board of firemasters where two firemen—one a captain and division head and the other a private, were charged with being intoxicated.

Fire Marshal M. H. Carter was found guilty of being intoxicated, driving recklessly, having an accident, and violating departmental rules. He was suspended for 60 days after much wrangling and a refusal to dismiss him.

E. C. DeFoor, fireman, pleaded guilty to drinking and was allowed to resign.

Mayor Asks Dismissal.

Hartsfield himself made the motion to discharge Carter, who is in charge of fire prevention work, but his motion failed for lack of a second.

"You are going to continue to have this department shot through and through with drinking unless you start firing them every time they are found guilty of being drunk," the mayor declared.

"We've had a deluge of drinking firemen because we have been too lenient with them," he added.

Fire Chief O. J. Parker, back on duty following recovery from injuries received in a wreck, recommended that Carter be suspended for 15 days (which had already elapsed) and that he be demoted to the ranks.

Alderman I. Gloer Hailey attempted to sponsor the chief's recommendation but other board members turned it down.

Alderman G. Dan Bridges moved Carter be suspended 90 days and this passed, 4 to 2, but the board later rescinded the action and reduced the suspension to 60 days. Councilman Howard Haile, C. M. Bolen, William Knight and John T. Marler, the board chairman, voted for the 60 days.

Charge Demotion Plan.

"I heard there was a plan to demote Carter and put R. C. Endicott in his place," he said.

Washington Chief Praises Work Of Georgia Vocational Agencies

John A. Kratz, Rehabilitation Director, Points to Assistance for 234 Persons and Declares Government Will Reach Many More in Need.

Progress of the vocational rehabilitation service in Georgia was praised yesterday by John A. Kratz, chief of rehabilitation of the United States Bureau of Education, in Atlanta, to attend the closing session of a three-day conference of the vocational rehabilitation division of the State Department of Education.

Kratz, who attended the conference in an advisory capacity, spoke briefly on activities of the rehabilitation service in a 15-minute broadcast over station WGST, stressing in particular the work being carried on in Georgia.

Declaring that he was glad to bear testimony of "the good work that is being done and to express the belief that the program will be expanded and developed so as to reach many more persons who are in need of service," Kratz pointed out that last year 234 persons in Georgia were rehabilitated at an average cost of $300.

"The average weekly wage of these persons was $15.76 and the total annual earnings $191,750," he said. "This record represents a fine investment of public funds, to say nothing of the collateral results in re-establishment of morale of the individual and in many cases the rehabilitation of the family."

Funds for rehabilitation work are allocated by the federal government to each state on the basis of population. In Georgia approximately $45,000 is allocated for the work, this sum being matched by the State Department of Education, according to Kratz. The program is designed chiefly to aid those who are suffering from some physical disability. Explaining the requirements, Mr. Kratz said persons eligible are those who are of legal age for employment, physically handicapped and unable to find employment. The vocational rehabilitation service is not a charity or welfare service, he explained, but a service of training a physically disabled person for remunerative employment.

"Under the legislation, state and federal, which established the service, persons are not rehabilitated unless they are placed in normal competitive employment such as is carried on regularly by those who are not disabled," he said. "In so far as eligibility for service is concerned, it makes no difference as to the origin of the physical disability, or the sex, race, education or work experience of the applicant for vocational rehabilitation."

Among other officials in attendance at the conference was H. B. Cummings, of Washington, regional director of 13 states.

Harrie Dewes also negotiated this sale.

Oglethorpe Girls Almost as Brainsy As Men Students

Co-eds at Oglethorpe University lost a close decision to the male students in scholastic averages for the spring term of school, Miss Ernestine Boineau, registrar, revealed yesterday.

Average for the boys was 81.7, while the girls scored 80.9. General average of the university was 81.3.

Frederick Goss, of Proctor, Vt., a sophomore in the college of science, placed first in the spring term roll with an average of 99, one of the highest in the history of the university. Alan Peterson, of Morrisville, Vt., placed second, with 97.3. He is a junior in the college of science.

Miss Ruth Fligg, a student in the graduate school, led the co-eds, with an average of 94.4, while Delta Sigma Phi fraternity, with an 86.8, and the Kappa Delta sorority, with an 83.1, led the Greek letter societies.

When averaged by the high schools from which they were graduated, local students from Commercial High school were found to have the highest average, 91.6.

Pamphlet Tells of LaFayette Georgia Visit in 1825

News and customs of three generations ago are cherished by Miss Julia Pindar Simpson, of 182 Ponce de Leon court, Decatur. In the above photograph Miss Simpson holds a copy of the pamphlet published in 1825 by one of her kinsmen which carried an account of the reception given in Savannah March 19 of that year for General LaFayette, to which her great-great-grandfather and mother, Judge and Mrs. Frederick Edmund Tebeau, of Savannah, were invited.

Decatur Girl Owns Old Chest Full of Rare Historical Relics

Miss Julia Pindar Simpson Delves Into Box Containing Account of LaFayette Savannah Reception and Receipts for Sales of Slaves.

By YOLANDE GWINN. A young Decatur schoolgirl dived into the history of the state, and the pamphlet which gives an account of their activities serves as a literary as well as historical gem.

In addition to the LaFayette pamphlet, Miss Simpson is one of the few of her generation who own the original receipts for the sale of slaves during the sixties.

One receipt, in legal form, represents the sale of a negro boy named Littlejohn, "of about 20 years old, of yellow complexion, warranted sound, except in one of his limbs and by a lame step in his walk." The slave sold by A. Bryan, of Savannah, to Miss Simpson's grandfather, Lewis C. Tebeau, also of Savannah, brought $1,200.

According to other receipts, slaves commanded a high price for another receipt was for $8,000 and represented the purchase made by Tebeau of four negroes, namely, Ben, his wife, Diana; Mike, aged 17, and Nannie, 18. The slaves were bought at Savannah from E. C. Corbett and the date was January 10, 1864.

The slave receipts, the LaFayette pamphlet and the other antiques form a historical and valuable part of the chest which Miss Simpson owns and which was brought to Atlanta recently from Valdosta, where they were owned by her maternal grandmother, Mrs. N. T. Pindar.

JAPANESE ENTER HUPEH PROVINCE

War Has Swept 400,000 Square Miles, Affected 250,000,000 Persons.

SHANGHAI, July 28.—(Thursday)—(P)—The Chinese-Japanese war today rolled into Hupeh province—the 11th of the 24 Chinese provinces to be afflicted by land combat in a struggle just one year and three weeks old.

The Chinese, admitting "a strategic withdrawal" from Kiukiang, gateway to Hupeh and the metropolitan Wuhan area centering on Hankow, dug in on a new defense line 20 miles up the Yangtze river and just ahead of the Japanese offensive.

The new defense line runs south from Lungping, on the north bank of the river, to Teian, 30 miles south of Kiukiang on the railway to Nanchang, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's greatest air base. Kiukiang fell Tuesday.

Chinese officials reported that cholera had broken out among refugees from Kiukiang and among the Chinese forces. Thirty-nine foreigners, including nine Americans, remained at Kiukiang or aboard the American and British gunboats Monocacy and Cockchafer and the British river steamer Wenchow.

Advancing upriver against the Lungping-Teian line, intent upon smashing it and shoving 10 miles further westward to Tienkichen and Wuseh, site of a submerged river boom, the Japanese carried their invasion into eastern Hupeh, part of a province of 71,000 square miles and 29,000,000 population.

The war now has swept 400,000 square miles of the 2,903,475 of China proper and has affected 250,000,000 persons of its estimated 450,000,000 population—either by land combat or by the operations of warships and warplanes.

A Japanese checkup following the capitulation of Kiukiang was said to have disclosed considerable damage to foreign property.

Japanese spokesmen said American and British oil establishments suffered greatly from Japanese shelling "because the Chinese had converted the properties into fortifications from which they had to be expelled."

LOYALISTS ENTER REBEL STRONGHOLD

Grapple Hand-to-Hand With Insurgents in Streets of Gandesa.

HENDAYE, France (At the Spanish Frontier), July 27.—(P)—The Spanish government announced tonight its three-day-old Ebro river offensive had carried Catalan shock troops into the streets of Gandesa, Generalissimo Franco's south Catalan headquarters since April 2.

There they grappled hand-to-hand with the insurgent forces that once had driven them from the town.

Entry of the town capped a surprise thrust of more than 15 miles from the banks of the Ebro in which the government reported capture of 15 villages and 4,000 prisoners.

The steamroller drive started early Monday when Catalan engineering squads, shielded by artillery, swiftly laid pontoon bridges to carry brigades of infantry and field batteries into insurgent territory.

The advance into Gandesa was said to have been effected despite some of the war's heaviest insurgent aerial operations—a day in which 150 heavy bombers unloaded explosives on the encroaching infantrymen hour after hour.

Throughout the day a squadron after squadron of blunt-nosed "Chatos"—Russian type pursuit planes—tackled the relays of heavy bombers. There were many aerial battles.

Advances from Burgos said 150 insurgent planes, each loaded with two tons of 225-pound bombs, were in the air all day, blasting at the government line.

These reports indicated Franco was relying largely on his planes to halt the government thrust against the numerically weaker insurgent armies. One Burgos report said this was "the first battle in which the air force had the premier role."

REBEL PLANE SINKS BRITISH FREIGHTER

MADRID, July 27.—(P)—Successful after two futile attacks, an insurgent seaplane today bombed and sank the British freighter Dellwyn in the British-leased port of Gandia. There were no casualties.

Two bombs struck the vessel as she was unloading a cargo of coal. One ripped a big hole below the waterline and the other crashed through the deck. The 1,451-ton ship sank in shallow water.

WARREN FAIRBANKS DIES AT AGE OF 60

Indianapolis Publisher Was Son of Former Vice President of U. S.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 27.—(P)—Warren C. Fairbanks, 60, publisher of the Indianapolis News, died in his home here today after a short illness. He was the son of Charles Warren Fairbanks, former vice president of the United States during the administration of President Theodore Roosevelt. Physicians said the immediate cause of death was a cerebral hemorrhage.

In addition to being publisher of the News, Fairbanks was identified with many other business interests.

Fairbanks was born in Indianapolis April 25, 1878. He was a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University.

He married Miss Ethel Cassidy of Pittsburgh, Pa., January 14, 1904. Two children were born to them. They are the Countess Ruggero Visconti di Modrone, now living in Italy, and Mrs. Frederick A. Poole Jr., of Chicago.

During the Spanish-American War Fairbanks served as captain in a volunteer regiment.

He was a director of the Pure Oil Company, the Metropolitan Gas & Electric Company and the Union Gas & Electric Company.

Long's Daughter Denies Father's Assistant Suggested Use of Ether

Mrs. Eugenia Harper, Replying to Film Narrator, Reveals Young Dr. Phil Wilhite Started to Work Two Years After Famous Operation.

By LEE ROGERS.

A current historical film, now showing in Atlanta, has raised once again the question of who first used ether as an anesthetic. This time the credit is being given chiefly to Dr. Phil Wilhite, a young doctor who interned in the office of Dr. Crawford W. Long in Jefferson.

In the film, the Dr. Smith specialty short subject, this week playing at the Rhodes theater, the narrator says the use of ether to perform the historical operation on James M. Venable was suggested to Dr. Long by his young assistant who had witnessed the strange effect of the drug on a negro slave in Anderson, S. C., several years earlier.

Just to keep the records straight, verification of this story was sought yesterday from Mrs. Eugenia Harper, daughter of Dr. Long. But, she told an entirely different story and offered letters from her father and Dr. Wilhite to prove her statements.

Contrary to the motion picture story, Dr. Long did not take Wilhite into his office until two years after the famous operation was performed, Mrs. Harper said.

"Wilhite worked in my father's office two years after the operation was performed," she explained.

ed. "Sometime after that he moved to Abbeville, S. C., and set up a practice. While in New York months later, he told a noted surgeon, Dr. Merriam Sims, that he had been present when my father performed the operation.

"Dr. Sims wrote my father that he had entertained his assistant and congratulated him on his discovery. Upon receipt of that letter, father wrote Wilhite asking him to correct his statement, calling attention that the only persons present when the operation was performed were Edward S. Rawls, James E. Hayes, William H. Thurman and A. T. Thurman, of Jefferson.

Wilhite replied the matter was trivial and as Dr. Sims was sailing soon for Europe he thought it best not to bother him with any explanation at the time. But father demanded it be explained and Wilhite replied he would correct it. Father kept this correspondence and later the expose was published.

Mrs. Harper has heard reports on the film from internes and nurses at Crawford W. Long hospital, where she is now confined. They tell her that her father is given the credit for performing the first operation under ether even if the picture gives the idea that Wilhite was the one suggesting it.

DR. HERTY, 71, DIES OF HEART AILMENT

Famous Little Scientist Developed Process for Making Pine Newsprint.

lina, of the Georgia Forestry Association. Less than two months before his death, the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association had announced plans to construct a $7,500,000 newsprint plant at Lufkin, Texas, as the first unit of a proposed chain of paper mills.

It was carrying out the vision of the gray-haired Herty, who, after years of experiment, had shown newsprint could be made comparatively economically from the millions of young pine dotting the southland.

Last year a group of Georgia newspapers printed editions on newsprint from pine and pronounced the results satisfactory.

A few months ago Dr. Herty announced successfully had made paper from black gums and tupelo gums, and begun experiments with soft maple.

Loved His Pines.

In his experiments, the Georgia-born Herty discovered animal-type fats in pines which he contended would become valuable by-products of the paper industry. The fats, extracted from the pine pulp, would be useful, he said, in making soaps and in certain mine flotation processes.

Friends said Dr. Herty "lived and loved his pine trees." His first scientific interest in forestry began in 1892 when he left an instructorship at the University of Georgia to join the United States Bureau of Forestry. In 1906 he developed a special type of turpentine cup for the naval stores industry.

He re-entered the teaching field as a professor of chemistry at the University of North Carolina, and later edited the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry for five years.

Dr. Herty married Miss Sophie Schaller December 23, 1895. She died August 19, 1929. He is survived by a daughter, Miss Sophie Dorothea Herty, of Savannah; two sons, Charles Holmes Herty Jr., of Bethlehem, Pa., and Frank Bernard Herty, of Brooklyn; and a sister, Mrs. W. D. Hooper, of Athens.

He was born at Milledgeville December 4, 1867, and attended the Georgia Military and Agricultural College. He was graduated from the University of Georgia in 1885, and received his Ph. D. degree from Johns Hopkins in 1890.

Held Honorary Degrees. He held numerous honorary degrees and membership in many societies. He held honorary degrees from Colgate University, Oglethorpe University, the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Georgia and the University of North Carolina.

Tributes came quickly following Dr. Herty's death. Governor Rivers said the scientist's death was "an incalculable loss to the state and the nation," and added that "millions of persons have benefited economically through the results of Dr. Herty's researches."

"Blow to South." James G. Stahlman, president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, said in Nashville: "Dr. Herty's death is a tremendous blow to the south and to the nation as well. He was a prophet of a new day, and while he has been honored during his lifetime, the full measure of his work will never be appreciated until its fruition several years hence."

Official Cut in Price Causes Beer 'Famine' BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 27.—(P)—Rumania's beer steins were dry as a bone today—right in the midst of a heat wave. Spigots were turned off when brewers and retailers quarreled over an interior ministry decree cutting retail beer prices 10 per cent.

'Heart Was Pounding,' Herty Said, Recalling Test of Pine Newsprint

Little Chemist Saw His Pulp Stand Up Under Giant Rollers.

"The sound of a bell ringing somewhere a long way off"—those were the words of Dr. Charles Holmes Herty as he sat beside giant rollers of a paper mill that were to roll paper from Georgia pine pulp and give the south a new period of industrial, economic and sociological development.

He sat a little apart in the vast room of a Canadian paper mill—a little bent, a little worn, but ready to carry on the fight to make his dream an actuality.

History was made as the giant

rollers of that mill turned out smooth ribbons of paper from Georgia pulp while Dr. Herty, the man who visualized the new industry for his native south, watched every inch of the hundreds of feet rolled in that trial run.

Today the results of the run on the first day of November, 1933, stand as a lasting tribute to the man who dedicated his entire career to service for his state and nation.

Dr. Herty's dream of developing paper from Georgia pines began during the decade before the turn of the century.

He was studying in Berlin and Zurich universities and noted that his European professors constantly deplored the waste in the southern part of the United States in development of naval stores.

Wanted to Correct Waste. The brilliant young chemist decided to do something to correct the waste, returned to the United States and began research on the subject of turpentine and rosin.

Results of this research may be seen along the highways of south Georgia where small cups can be seen on the trunks of pine trees catching the thin trickle of sap. Dr. Herty gave the state those cups.

Previously, pines had been killed by the old methods of tapping. The trees were deeply boxed until Dr. Herty noticed one day a left-handed negro strike a light blow on a tree by mistake. He conceived the Herty cup and gutter which could be used with a small cut, thus saving the trees from being killed. That cup brought a 10-million-dollar increase in income to the south the year after turpentine operators adopted it.

From that desire to save southern pine trees, sprang Dr. Herty's dream of a new industry from the Georgia pine. Years later his research had carried his dream to its final stages in a far-away paper mill above Niagara.

"Heart Was Pounding." As Dr. Herty sat in the room of that mill waiting the shifting of the levers that would start the giant rollers, he "had a lot of trouble breathing," he later said.

"My heart was pounding and in my ears there was the sound of a bell ringing somewhere a long way off," he said.

The crucial moment came and passed. His experiments were successful. Paper from Georgia pine pulp ran on the rollers without a break or blemish.

To meet Dr. Herty face to face was to form an instant decision that here was a man who did things. His speech was rapid and clipped, he laughed a good deal, and his deep-set blue eyes sparkled with the light usually detected in men of the outdoors.

He was an outdoor man. He loved the piney woodlands around his native Savannah. And at the University of Georgia he took an active part in athletics.

He was director of athletics at the university for nine years. He organized the first football games played in the state and took a leading part in other athletic activities.

It was after his graduation from the University of Georgia in 1886 that he first decided to enter chemistry seriously. He was graduated with highest honors and continued his scientific research, studying at Johns Hopkins, the Universities of Berlin and Zurich. He later studied at the University of Pittsburgh and Colgate.

Laboratory in Warehouse.

An old water-front warehouse in Savannah was the birthplace of southern newsprint.

At that warehouse, Dr. Herty set up his laboratory in 1932. He developed the formula which he used in the evolution of Georgia pine trees into long white rolls of paper for newsprint.

It all began in 1927 when he took pines that a friend in Savannah had thinned out and analyzed sawdust from 30 of them. Other chemists had contended southern pines had too much resin to develop as a pulp for paper, but Dr. Herty differed in his views.

His research and analysis proved he was correct. His laboratory was established in 1932 after $50,000 had been donated toward the Chemical Foundation project. The state of Georgia put up $20,000 and Savannah added backing.

A year later, November 1, 1933, the first newsprint was manufactured. Ten days later, The Atlanta Constitution, and eight other newspapers in Atlanta and over the state printed most of their editions for the day on paper produced from Dr. Herty's pine pulp formula.

The paper on which those newspapers were printed was manufactured by Canadian machines that rolled sheets out at 400 to 1,200 feet per minute. That was the test Dr. Herty had to see to a successful completion. He knew it could go through rollers of small machines in his laboratory, but whether it would break under heavy pressure he was not certain.

Pulp for the experiment left railroad yards in Savannah October 22, 1933, in three refrigerator cars. The run began late in the afternoon October 31 in the Beaver Wood Fibre Company, which had agreed to give Dr. Herty's formula a trial.

The run began and rolled until the early hours following morning. History had been made. Although indifference followed, Dr. Herty kept struggling. The Georgia legislature at its special session, taking cognizance of the industry's future established the Herty Foundation. The measure provided that other southeastern states could lend financial aid.

Dr. Herty has received national honors for his discoveries of pine pulp newsprint and rayon products from pine sulphite formulas. He has received honorary degrees from colleges and universities throughout the nation.

Dr. Herty was listed by Henry Ford as one of the greatest benefactors of mankind.

Dr. Herty in 1890 started up the ladder as assistant instructor of chemistry at the Georgia State Experiment Station. He went up rapidly and soon became a professor at the University of North Carolina, teaching there from 1905 to 1916.

He was sent in 1919 by President Wilson to confer with German authorities in Germany on purchases of large quantities of dye. He later worked with Senator Ransdell in forming the bill creating the National Institute of Health.

RFC TO PARTICIPATE IN PWA'S 'PRIMING'

Jones' Agency Will Make Loans, and Ickes Will Make Grants.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(AP)—Jesse Jones threw huge resources of his Reconstruction Finance Corporation behind the public works program tonight. This made possible a large expansion of the pump-priming operations through which the Roosevelt administration hopes to hasten economic recovery.

Jones and PWA Administrator Harold L. Ickes, two "big money" men of President Roosevelt's spending-lending program, agreed that wherever possible RFC would make loans for public construction and PWA would conserve its money exclusively for outright grants. Hitherto, PWA has been making both loans and grants.

Under the new system it will be possible, officials said, to undertake more big projects such as roads and bridges than if PWA had to furnish all the money itself. The last congress gave Jones' agency power to lend $1,500,000,000 to state, cities and businessmen.

High officials said: "Jones and Ickes have been exploring the possibility of RFC making loans on projects requiring dollars by the millions, and their minds have met."

Later Jones himself confirmed this. Other officials explained that RFC co-operation would be limited to revenue-producing projects such as roads, bridges, subways and others designed to pay off the loan from toll charges.

New Textbook Honors Herty For His Work

Tribute to the lasting work of Dr. Charles H. Herty's work is paid in a new textbook on Georgia's natural resources which the State Department of Education began sending out yesterday to all teachers in the state school system.

The 222-page book is part of the Georgia program for improvement of public school instruction. It will be used in the eighth grade and will be supplied to all eighth grade students.

Divisions of the Department of Natural Resources collaborated with the school department in preparing the text. Dr. Herty who died today is given credit for much of the improvement in the Georgia naval stores industry and for his expansion of the paper industry into the south.

M. E. Thompson, assistant state school superintendent, was in charge of preparation of the book. It contains sections on state parks, wild life, mining and geology.

BOOSTERS OF F. D. R. ANNOUNCE RALLY

Marion Allen To Speak at Program Tuesday.

A rally in appreciation of President Roosevelt's program for Georgia and the south will be held Tuesday night at the Ansley hotel, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Regina Rambo Benson.

Mrs. Benson, president of the Georgia Women's Democratic Club, said the program will be under auspices of the recently organized Roosevelt Boosters' Club and the Georgia Women's Democratic Club.

Principal speakers will be Marion Allen and Charles S. Reid, chairman of the Georgia Democratic executive committee.

RIVERS OFFERS AID TO PEEK PROBERS

Governor Declares He Wants To 'See the Right Thing Done.'

Governor Rivers yesterday offered co-operation of his office in clearing up the mysterious murders of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ed Peek.

The Governor said: "It seems those people were brutally murdered and I want to see the right thing done."

The state's chief executive made the statement when Commissioner Charlie Head, of Cobb county, and a group of citizens from Marietta conferred with him briefly regarding completion of the new Marietta-Atlanta highway.

The Governor earlier in the day expressed a desire to learn more about a statement by Deputy Sheriff George McMillan and Petrolman E. C. Ward, both of Cobb county, that "the state penal board and a neighboring county" had allegedly hindered the investigation by lack of co-operation.

"Glad To Co-operate."

Mention of the Peek murders was incidental, however, as the Governor told the Mariettians: "I will be glad to co-operate in any phase of the investigation if my office is called upon to do so."

Meanwhile, A. C. Blalock, chairman of the state penal board, which the Cobb county investigators accused of hindering the investigation by refusing to make permanent transfer of five convicts from the Carroll county prison camp at Carrollton to the Cobb county jail at Marietta, said the prisoners will be transferred to Tattall prison.

Blalock announced the transfer would be made "whenever word comes from the solicitor that the men are no longer wanted or needed by Cobb county investigators."

Blalock Bewildered. Blalock also expressed bewilderment regarding a statement made public by McMillan and Ward, including a copy of a memorandum in which the penal board outlined its reasons for not making the transfer permanent when requested more than a week ago.

It was understood Blalock and H. G. Vandivier, solicitor general of the Blue Ridge circuit, which includes Cobb county, will confer soon relative to transfer of the prisoners to Reidsville.

Blalock stated, in this connection: "The men will be sent to Tattall, and there they can be questioned by anyone interested in questioning them, either about the Peek case or anything else."

Ward and McMillan, actively investigating since the bodies of the slain Atlantans were found June 21 in a railroad cut on the Marietta-Austell highway, had previously pointed out that no helpful information could be gained from the convicts because the men declined to talk unless assured they did not have to return to the Carroll county camp.

Lengthy Statement. The officers issued a lengthy statement Tuesday night in which they "threw the case into the laps of the state penal board and a

JOSEPH LEE'S LIFE WILL BE HONORED

WPA Parks Department To Sponsor Programs.

Special programs, commemorating the life of Joseph Lee, founder of the organized playground movement in America, will be presented by children of Atlanta's supervised playgrounds in all sections of the city today. The activity is sponsored by the Atlanta parks department and the WPA recreational division.

The program on each playground will be similar and will open with the singing of "America" and a brief address on the life of Joseph Lee. Events scheduled will include hop scotch, hill dill, three deep, prisoner's base, a volleyball game, looby loo, farmer in the dell, ring toss and group singing.

Lee, a native of Boston, helped organize and became an officer in the Playground Association of America in 1906. He served for 37 years as president of the organization which has done much to get better recreation for boys and girls.

PICK-A-BACK ARRIVES HOME. SOUTHAMPTON, England, July 27.—(P)—The British Pick-a-Back seaplane Mercury arrived here at 8:20 p. m. (2:20 p. m., Atlanta time) tonight from Lisbon on the next to the last leg of her double crossing of the Atlantic. She is to fly from here to her base at Foynes, Ireland.

neighboring county," whom they accused of "throwing the murders in their laps."

Both investigators stressed the fact that investigation thus far indicated the actual murders took place in a county other than Cobb. Meanwhile, Deputy Sheriff H. R. Lambert, of Carroll county, issued a statement in which he said the "Carroll county sheriff's office has co-operated as fully as possible with Cobb county officers since help was requested about a week ago."

"When McMillan failed to ask for our assistance in the case," Lambert declared, "I considered that he must have a reason for doing so."

"Since the Cobb county officers contacted us, we have gone to Marietta to confer with them several times and have rendered every assistance within our power in the investigation."

Does Not Resent Charges. "I do not understand why the charges were made against Carroll county, but I do not resent them, and we intend to continue to co-operate in the investigation."

"The Carroll county sheriff's office has been conducting an investigation of the Peek case and intends to continue it vigorously. "In this investigation we hope to have the full co-operation of Cobb county officials, and to have access to whatever facts have been, or may be, uncovered by their efforts."

"It is our wish to see the case cleared up, and we believe that co-operation between Cobb and Carroll counties will be wholehearted and mutual."

The five convicts remained at the Cobb county jail yesterday. It was learned they are lodged in separate cells and in different parts of the jail.

Meanwhile, the Cobb county grand jury, which reconvened Tuesday and which was expected to probe the Peek slayings, went about routine business. A possibility existed that the convicts might be questioned by the grand jury, a reliable source said.

WHEAT, 19, SLAYER OF AGED GROCER, FOILED IN ESCAPE

Cellmate Joins 'Model Boy' in Attack on Jailer Spinks at Marietta.

MARIETTA, Ga., July 27.—(AP)—An additional sentence of 10 years was imposed late today upon Sam J. Wheat Jr., 19-year-old "model boy" of Lithia Springs, who is under death sentence for the murder of W. W. Cape Sr., elderly Austell grocer.

The sentence was passed by Judge J. H. Hawkins after Wheat and another prisoner in the Cobb county jail here, Jimmy Lee Fox, 35, beat Jailer Thomas Spinks in an attempted escape early this morning. The charge was assault with intent to murder, and Fox was given ten years on the same charge.

Snatching the keys from Jailer Spinks, the two prisoners beat him severely, but their plan was frustrated by Deputy Sheriff J. F. Hicks.

Hicks said he heard Spinks call for aid, ran to the jail's assistance and subdued the two men without trouble. They were identified as Wheat and Jimmy Lee Fox, 35. The deputy said a third occupant of the cell did not participate in the break.

One of the prisoners hit Spinks with a bottle as he entered their cell while the other took the keys, Hicks declared. Spinks was taken to the Marietta hospital for treatment. His condition was described as "not critical."

Officers said it was the first time Wheat had been misbehaved since he was sentenced the latter part of April. Wheat is now awaiting a ruling of the supreme court on his case. Fox was under a five-year sentence for abandonment of his wife and a minor child, Hicks said.

Advised Others Against Crime.
A Constitution reporter interviewed Wheat in his cell soon after he was sentenced to the electric chair. At that time he brooded over his crime and advised other boys to steer clear of a similar fate.

He then seemed a normal boy who had made a false step and was in trouble. He revealed an educational background. He tried to explain he resorted to violence only in self-defense. He wanted his mother.

"The best thing you can do is listen to the advice of your father and mother," he declared then. "Keep your hands off guns; rule them out of your life entirely, and forget this stuff about the glory of being a gangster; it's just a lot of hooey."

He was an ardent reader, and maybe the long days and nights spent with his books in the sombre atmosphere of his cell have caused him to grow bitter. Faced with the possibility of death in the electric chair perhaps he no longer has the hope that glowed within him back in April. He wasn't afraid then. Apparently he is now.

Was Model Young Man.
Wheat filled practically every requirement of a model youth before his crime. He was graduated from Douglasville High school. He was a member of the football and basketball teams. He never smoked or drank. He was a member of the church and went to Sunday school regularly.

But yesterday young Wheat showed another side of his life. No longer the docile, regretful youth he was three months ago, he reached back into his past and grasped some of the temperament that must have clutched him when he shot the 60-year-old Austell grocer last January.

Prison walls bore down heavily upon him three months ago, but now they hover around him like black ghosts. Still he must sit in his cell and gaze through iron bars. Still he can see the shadow of a grimmer thing, the electric chair, and wonder what's ahead for Sam J. Wheat Jr.

MERCHANTS WANT NO TAX INCREASE

People Paying as Much as They Can Stand, Claims Association.

MACON, Ga., July 27.—(AP)—Directors of the Georgia Mercantile Association at a called session here today unanimously favored a state program of "no more taxes—economy in government."

Following a discussion of routine matters, the board adopted resolutions deploring extravagance and waste in government and declaring "we believe that present state taxes are as high as the people can possibly stand."

The meeting was called by J. P. Allen, Atlanta, president. Other members of the board here were T. J. Stewart, Macon; R. Frierson, Gainesville; Fred Davis, Valdosta; Clarence Levy, Augusta; B. C. Kersey, Newnan; Turner Jones, Valdosta; Jack Robinson, Rome; B. B. Ivey, Albany, and J. du Pont Kirven, Columbus.

L. L. Austin, executive secretary, also attended.

BISCUITS OF 'LEAD'

Family of 8 Taken Ill After Eating Them.

DECATUR, Ala., July 27.—(UP)—Eight members of a Morgan county family were seriously ill tonight after eating biscuits made with arsenate of lead instead of baking powder.

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Townsend, their three children, a niece, a nephew and Townsend's mother were in serious condition and remained under a physician's care. The niece, Pearl Townsend, made the biscuits for supper last night, using powder from a can labeled baking powder but containing arsenate of lead instead.

Girl Is Rescued From 16th Story

NEW YORK, July 27.—(AP)—In the wake of last night's spectacular 17-story death plunge of John Warde, police today rescued a girl who gave her name as Betty Voronin, 24, of Irvington, N. J., from the roof of a building at 320 Fifth avenue.

Police coaxed the girl to safety after she had been seen pacing back and forth on the narrow parapet of the 16-story building. The girl, pretty and well-dressed, was taken to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue hospital after being questioned at the West 30th street police station.

NEW FINANCE PLAN SAVES WESLEYAN

School Will Continue To Operate Under Control of Methodist Church.

MACON, Ga., July 27.—(AP)—Approval of a new financing plan under which Wesleyan College will refinance a bonded debt of approximately $1,000,000 was announced today.

Orville A. Park, trustee of Wesleyan and spokesman of the board, said the agreement means Wesleyan will "continue to operate as heretofore under control of the Georgia conferences of the Methodist church."

Details of the financing plan were not announced. It was said that the bondholders' committee had a majority vote accepting the plan, however, and that the next step would be the raising of funds for Wesleyan to meet the new requirement.

Park said the trustees expected to get busy raising this fund immediately and that they would announce "full details later."

It was reported bondholders representing $518,000 in bonds voted to accept the plan; $135,000 was voted against it; $192,000 was not voted but failure to vote was described by the bondholders' committee as equivalent to approval.

Thomas M. Johnson, of Savannah; E. K. Hagerman, of St. Louis, and John McCorkle, of New Orleans, make up the committee. Park said Wesleyan would be open for the new school year "with the largest registration of new students in its history."

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(AP)—Extensions of time ranging from one day to a month, in which growers may apply for wheat insurance on their 1939 crop, has been authorized by directors of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

Roy M. Green, manager, said today August 31 would be the final date for receiving applications in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina. The deadline for these states originally was set for August 30.

Green said the closing date for states not otherwise designated would be August 31.

SOVIET CONTINUES 'MERCILESS PURGE'

Action Against Spies Is Order From Stalin.

MOSCOW, July 27.—(UP)—Soviet Russia is carrying out a "merciless purge" of Japanese spies and Trotskyist conspirators in the Vladivostok region of the far east, near the storm center of the Manchoukuan border disputes with Japan, it was reported tonight in dispatches reaching Moscow.

The purge, involving the Vladivostok maritime province of far eastern Siberia and the Red army and naval forces stationed in the strategic area, was said to have started several weeks ago under personal orders from Dictator Josef V. Stalin.

The tracking down of the "enemies and spies" is being continued "unswervingly," according to the July 16 edition of the Newspaper Pacific Ocean Star of Khabarovsk which reached Moscow today.

MRS. BILBO TO RUN ON DIVORCE FUNDS

Settlement Will Finance Race Against Ex-Mate.

JACKSON, Miss., July 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Linda Ruth Bilbo, ex-wife of United States Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, said today she planned to use part of the $20,750 received as a divorce settlement last week to finance a campaign against Bilbo for the senate in 1940.

"But I don't plan to use all of it," she said. "Although I will be an independent candidate, with no concentrated financial backing, my friends all have said they would help with campaign expenses."

Mrs. Bilbo, who revealed yesterday she had contemplated opposing her former husband in the 1940 race for "many months," said today she would go in for no hurdy-gurdy campaigning.

IMPORTANT LABOR DECISION

A feeling has prevailed for some time that the unilateral decisions of the National Labor Relations Board would not only prove detrimental to labor as a whole, but would eventually lead to reversals in the higher courts. The feeling has become a reality. Last week the United States circuit court of appeals, in Chicago, upheld the right of an employer to discharge workers who seize property during strikes, setting aside a NLRB order. The case was carried to the higher court when the board found the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation, which refused collective bargaining with one union, guilty of unfair labor practices and ordered the reinstatement of 92 men discharged in February, 1937, after they had occupied the company's plant during a strike.

Holding that the sit-down strikers lost their status as employees when the company discharged them, the court said: "There was no longer a majority of employees who were members of the union which sought collective bargaining rights. It is urged by the board that the commission of a crime by strikers (taking unlawful possession of property) does not preclude their rights to bargain. This we admit, provided they are still employees and represent a majority of all employees. What we hold is that there was just cause for discharge, it was exercised and those who have not been re-employed are not employees and were not at the time of the order of the board."

Furthermore, said the court: "It cannot be denied that an employer is warranted in discharging his employees when they take and retain exclusive possession of his property against his will." These rulings, however, having as they do a vital bearing on the future relations of industry and labor, are to be carried to the supreme court of the United States for further adjudication.

It is not to be denied the labor board has had a most difficult job on its hands. Many of its troubles, however, can be traced directly to the act which created it, as well as to its individual members who, no doubt, have felt they were acting within the scope of their authority. But so many of its rulings have been attacked as prejudicial as to give the board a wide reputation for unfairness, even within the ranks of labor. This has worked, indirectly, against the cause of labor. It has had the effect of cooling the friendship of many people who were sympathetic with the movement.

In view of the disturbing effect the Wagner act has had on labor relations in general, rather than the intended pacifying influences, the wisdom of a thorough revamping of the law, as well as finding more judiciously-minded men for the board, can no longer be doubted. The impression prevails on the outside that the majority of recent labor disputes can be attributed to factional differences and personal ambitions within the ranks of labor.

Now, the American Federation of Labor charges the NLRB with promoting the "insurgent" unions of CIO. While the supreme court can be relied upon to render a decision fair to both industry and labor, it remains for labor itself to settle its factional differences and for congress to revise the act into a workable law.

TOBACCO GOES TO MARKET

Now comes one of the most important seasons in the Georgia year, when tobacco goes to market. Today, in many south Georgia towns, the cry of the auctioneer will echo through the great warehouses and the tobacco farmers' efforts of a year will be translated into cash.

The growth of tobacco culture in this state during the past decade or so has brought a large new income to everyone within its borders. For the money that is paid for the tobacco raised on Georgia fields percolates throughout the entire business and financial structure. It reaches north to the business houses of Atlanta and adds new currency to the trade arteries of every description in the state.

Last year the tobacco crop brought to Georgia more than fifteen and a half million dollars, while the average price paid for the aromatic weed was close to 20 cents a pound. It is, of course, hoped that the banner year of 1937 will be surpassed this year.

Steady improvement in the quality of the crop has worked to improve prices. This is due not only to the interest and effort expended by the tobacco growers themselves, but to the excellent work done by the agricultural agents of the tobacco growing counties. Better methods of curing have added considerably to the average prices paid for several years past.

Tobacco has become one of the chief money crops of the state. Its golden stream of cash will begin to flow today and it will not cease until banks and merchants and workers and farmers in every county of the state have felt, directly or indirectly, the benefit.

CHARLES HOLMES HERTY

The death of Dr. Charles H. Herty brings to a close a career which has contributed more to the economic welfare of Georgia and the south, in all probability, than any other of the times. Dr. Herty, through his experiments in the making of paper pulp from southern pine and other woods, opened the door for a new industry that is rapidly taking leading place in the southeast. Without his pioneering work the great pulp and paper plants which are today operating in this section of the country, would never have become reality.

He was a man of peculiar loyalty to the state of his birth. The welfare of Georgia was ever uppermost in his heart and mind and all his research work was done with the simple purpose of helping the people of his native state.

He was born in Milledgeville in 1867, educated at the Georgia Military and Agricultural College and at the University of Georgia. He held degrees from many institutions of higher learning, both in this country and abroad.

The climax of his life's work came with the establishment of the experimental pulp and paper laboratory at Savannah. There he achieved his greatest triumphs and it was there he hoped to bring to perfection his work.

The work that he did forms the finest memorial to the life of the man. He would ask no other, valuing above all things those gifts of greater opportunity he was enabled to give his state, his section and his nation.

Yet there is one tribute and memorial that Georgians may give, one which would please Dr. Herty beyond all else. That is to see that the work he began so well is continued until it comes to the fruition of his dreams.

TEXAS AND KENTUCKY

Despite the assertion by New Deal politicians that the defeat of Maury Maverick for renomination to congress from Texas was due entirely to local conditions and issues, it cannot be denied that Maverick had been given the approval of President Roosevelt and that he was a leader of the extreme "left wing" of the last congress.

Thus, regardless of the entry of local conditions into the primary in which Maverick went down to defeat, the result takes out of the next national house of representatives one member who was, in practically all issues, a certain voter for the liberal policies of the New Deal.

Maverick's victorious opponent declares he is in favor of the New Deal, in general terms, but will in no event become a "rubber stamp" representative. Which coincides with the political viewpoint of a large majority of the Democrats of the nation, even those classed as "conservatives" by the administration. The broad policies of the New Deal are desirable to all, it is only some details of method that are opposed, because they would cost more in sacrifice of basic American principle than they would gain.

However, the Maverick defeat draws more vital attention to the coming primaries in Kentucky. Maverick had been given the presidential accolade. Senator Alben Barkley has been given more than that. He has been the beneficiary of the most vigorous and direct effort to influence the outcome of a Democratic primary yet exerted by the President.

Turning again to Texas, the nomination of W. Lee O'Daniel to be Governor not only perplexes, but worries the New Deal leaders. For his campaign, as little as two weeks before primary day, was dismissed as a "sideshow" affair, not to be considered seriously.

In Kentucky Governor "Happy" Chandler, Senator Barkley's opponent, has made a campaign in some respects similar to the O'Daniel campaign in Texas. He has not acquired some of the O'Daniel adjuncts, such as a hillbilly band, and he has not adopted the Ten Commandments as his platform. But the spirit of the two campaigns is largely similar.

If Chandler should be the victor in Kentucky, a by no means impossible outcome, the New Deal would suffer the most severe blow it has yet known. Latest test polls indicate that Senator Barkley will probably be renominated. These polls show that Chandler is gaining strength, but hardly fast enough to win by primary time.

Georgians are watching the Kentucky primary intently, for the situation there, in the senatorial race, is strikingly similar to that in this state. Both are, in the final analysis, tests of the vote-pulling power of the Roosevelt participation in state primaries.

"Believe it or not," said the politician, on coming to earth 6,000 miles from a pre-election promise, "I thought this was California."

Editorial of the Day

AN EXCELLENT CHOICE
(From The Asheville Citizen-Times.)

Finland is small in size and resources. She has no large standing army. She is not trying to impose her will on other nations. She is not justifying after any other country's territory.

In some material respects, however, she is a major power. For one instance, of all the debtor nations, she is the only one that is meeting with calendar punctuality her obligations to the United States. She has maintained her solvency at a time when richer nations have seen fit to shy away from their international debts.

No better hostess for the Olympics could be imagined. The Finnish people have long since demonstrated their love of sports and their instincts of good sportsmanship. The simple fact that she is not disturbing the peace of the world with her ambitions makes her selection all the more fitting.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

LABOR PARTY TO WITHDRAW WASHINGTON, July 27. As everyone knows, the American Labor party in New York is a confederation of organized workers and liberal intellectuals, constituting a powerful independent vote. It was born of the New Deal, and its members are New Dealers, not Democrats. And it is now on the verge of an open break with New York's Democratic organizations.

Already, in New York city, the Labor party has made a trade with the Republicans, uniting on a half-breed ticket for the state legislature. Labor party leaders, in announcing the deal, admitted frankly that snubs by the Democrats had driven them into the Republicans' arms. They proclaimed themselves still faithful New Dealers, and swore that their New York city trade was a strictly local matter.

Actually, however, the incident is a remarkably significant symbol of the bitter conflict between organization Democrats and the New Deal's left-wing allies. And in spite of the leaders' protestations, there is a chance that the incident will be repeated on a larger scale in the future.

DEWEY AND DUBINSKY

Within the Labor party there are two powerful wings, one led by Sidney Hillman, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and the other by David Dubinsky, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers. The Hillman wing is most strongly pro-New Deal and wholly loyal to the CIO. The Dubinsky wing is chilly to the CIO, ambitious, and independent-minded.

As it happens, the able and egotistical Dubinsky is close to Tom Dewey, New York city's mass production St. George. The pressure is strong on the crusading young district attorney to accept the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Dewey himself is seriously considering it. And Dubinsky is making no secret of his inclination to support Dewey, if Dewey runs.

Dubinsky is telling his friends that Postmaster General James A. Farley and the leaders of the Democratic organizations in New York have repeatedly and purposefully snubbed the Labor party. He argues that the Labor party must teach the Democrats a lesson—and how better than by helping to elect a Republican Governor? He holds out great hopes of rewards from the Republicans, in congressional seats, judgeships and the like.

IN NOVEMBER Before Dubinsky can carry out his daring project, several obstacles must be surmounted. While the Labor party's Hillman wing was willing to flout the Democrats in New York city, it would certainly be far more reluctant to do so in the state. And Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, the strongest individual in the Labor party, loves Tom Dewey just a little less than he loves Governor Herbert H. Lehman. He would be likely to leave the reservation of either noisily.

Then, too, there is the problem of the upstate Republicans. Kenneth Simpson, the New York city leader, has always had the shrewd vision to play up to the Labor party. But the Republicans upstate still flounder in a morass of dank stupidity. They regard the Labor party people as untouchable radicals, and might well prefer defeat to victory with such help.

Nevertheless, the pattern is there. The organization Democrats, under Jim Farley, have kicked the Labor party around. Once dependable allies, the Labor party leaders are now threatening desertion. If they desert, the Democrats will probably be beaten in November.

WHO WILL WE HAVE?

The truth is, it's about time for the organization Democrats to take thought for their position. In their struggle to prevent the President from putting New Dealers in control of their party, they have ignored the signs of danger.

Take the problem of the AFL. Because the AFL has opposed aggressively New Dealish, CIO-sympathizing Democrats in the primaries, the organization leaders assume the AFL is with them. Actually, however, Representative Bruce Barton and one or two other Republicans have been hobnobbing assiduously with AFL President William Green. They have whispered that the Republicans would love to have the AFL on their side again. And Bill Green has not been inattentive.

Before the organization Democrats pass sentence of exile on their New Deal friends, they will do well to ask, "Just who will we have with us?" (Copyright, 1938, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

I used to think I'd like to be
A millionaire some day,
But now I'm satisfied if I
Can live and pay my way.

To have a million bucks, or so,
Maybe a pleasant state,
But think of all the tax you pay
And how the envious hate.

And after all, the best in life
Is never placed on sale,
I'll leave the hills, the meadows,
Content; you can have the kale.

The Easiest
To Deceive.
Of all the persons you know
Who, do you think, is the easiest
To deceive?

Edward Bulwer Lytton told the answer, approximately a century ago, when he wrote:
"The easiest person to deceive is one's own self."

Yet, in that self-deception, lies the greatest handicap to success, in any endeavor, for any member of the human race.

For only by true judgment can anyone evaluate progress, ability or capacity. And the man who self-flattered and self-deceived, over-values his own ability or progress is the man who, eventually, is going to be disillusioned. And, disillusioned, he becomes morose, resigned to evil fate and useless.

The Road To Success.
Conversely, the one who would succeed is the one who can despise all inner temptations, look himself firmly in the eye of the spirit and list, without evasion, all his own faults. For, until faults are admitted, there is no hope of correction.

I don't suppose there ever was a criminal who did not, impelled by desire, justify his own evil acts to himself. For this is the way he deceives himself and thus he makes it possible to live with his own conscience and his own soul. Sinners so depraved that they would believe they would revolt at life with their own memories, nevertheless explain and justify their acts to themselves. No deed so foul it cannot become heroic in the mind of its perpetrator, if granted time for self-deception.

This is the fundamental reason why the church sets such store on confession of sins, either secretly, within one's own chamber, or to an agent of the church. Confessed sins are acknowledged sins and are in fair way to elimination.
That is the theory.

In practice, of course, the thing to do is to frankly admit to yourself that your previous life has been imperfect. Then set out the course you must pursue to improve your habits and your thoughts.
And then forget the evil of the past.
Remembered evil is evil still existent and the things which are in our minds are the things which shall be, sooner or later, actualities.

Self-Pride
A Snare.
Proper pride in self is necessary for the upright man. Yet too much self-pride is a snare that leads to failure and to defeat. Self-pride that seeks ever to improve and to become more worthy of name or station or duty in life is the element that lifts men to greatness.

Self-pride that covers the evil done with camouflage and that seeks to justify every smallness and pettiness of the spirit as something individually laudable, is the pride that leads to defeat.

Do not alibi within the secret recesses of your own soul. Do not condone your own offenses and do not exaggerate your own achievements or potentialities. Remember, only God knows the secrets of the human heart. He knows more even than the possessor of that heart himself.

Be honest. Seek always to evaluate yourself correctly, and you will become a giant among men.
Be warned by Lytton. Remember,
"The easiest person to deceive is one's own self."

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.
From The Constitution of Monday,
July 28, 1913:

"Washington—Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, summoned from Mexico City to inform the Washington administration of conditions in the rebellion-torn republic, talked for an hour with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan today, submitting chiefly a recommendation that the United States use its influence to stabilize the Huerta regime."

And Fifty Years Ago.
From The Constitution of Saturday,
July 28, 1868:

"For some time Atlanta has enjoyed a first-class ice famine. Her population has grown so rapidly and the people's love for a cool drink has become so great that the ice houses here could not supply the demand, and consequently they had to send to Cincinnati for ice. This famine has continued for several days, but it is now thought to be nearing its end."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Of Supreme Importance NEW YORK, July 27.—Interviewed by a journalist from the Star Miss Peggy Hopkins Joyce is said to have said: "Everywhere I go they ask me the same two questions—'are you in love, Peggy?'
and 'when are you going to marry-ry?'"

These are intimate questions, and I hereby offer to accept the presidency of a great international order of those who never have asked and never will ask them—not out of good manners, however, but because we can imagine, in the phrase of Bunker Bean, nothing of less consequence. Not to trust any members of the order to keep secret reservations. I openly propose in advance that this society be further committed to a program of vigorous and unflinching indifference as to whether Miss Greta Garbo has married, intends to marry or doesn't give a whoop if hell for Leopold Stokowsky; where and when Charlie Chaplin married Miss Paulette Goddard; whether Miss Lupe Velez remains married to or gets a divorce from John Weismuller, and whether Mr. Billy Rose, the present husband of Miss Fanny Brice, has any intention or desire to marry any other lady, particularly Miss Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the swimmer.

This prospectus clears up the current, pressing business of the proposed society, but the program should be left open at one end so that other items may be added as they occur in the romantic life of persons of similar distinction.
Someone may wish to nominate for the official and formal intention of our society the affairs of Mr. Tommy Manville, but I, a businessman, would argue against adoption on the ground that the roll of those who would rather not hear any more about the love life of this scion and who find the mere mention of his name more or less sick-making is limited only by the roster of the human race.

Conquests

We should, I think, confine to live issues, not waste it on the confirmation of conquests already won. I would apply the same thought to any future involvements of Enzo Fiermonte, the Italian pugilist who married the widow of an Astor but presently asked Madison Square Garden to get him a fight, saying to Mr.
James J. Johnston, the matchmaker, "I gotta earn my leevins these is a hella way to earn my leevins."

A friend to whom I explained the purposes of the society expressed eagerness to become one of the founding members and proposed that we add to the list of matters to which we will address our collective indifference the question of who is to play the role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind." It later developed, however, that the lady who is to play this role already had been selected without our having noticed as much, so we decided that this one also was finished business and need not clutter up our program. We did think, though, that the social activities of the Countess Dorothy di Frasso, of Hollywood, no matter who the countess might be—and we are sure we do not know—would be watching and, given a little more publicity in the gossip columns, might qualify for the full force of our unanimous concern. And we would have placed on the tentative list the marrying of that Chicago lady who inherited a patent on a cash income of between $200 and $300 per year. On that we could not remember any of her names. This seemed to dispose of her without a contest.

Our Motto: Regarding Miss Joyce, whose re-

"So What?" marks on love and marriage inspired this idea, the story from London observed that she married first in 1912—a subtle but potent reminder that this inveterate bride has been marrying, off and on, for a quarter of a century. The whole generation has been born and come to manhood and womanhood since she took her first vows, and we look for a large list of eligibles among this class, many of whom may wonder why anyone ever asked Miss Joyce whether she were in love and when she was going to marry.
Among the elders, nevertheless,
there must be many others who took her ventures calmly and never asked her or even themselves, "is Peggy Joyce in love?"
Gallup might take a poll on that one.

Assurance is given that anyone wishing to join our society need have no fear that any inside clique will commit the members to the Spanish Loyalists, the New Deal or the CIO or against any or all of these anything else.
There was neither for nor against anybody or anything, for indifference is our invariable policy, and this is our motto: So what?

Little Willie Can't Obtain a Nickel by Threatening Dad With a Whip

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

There are certain unwritten rules, necessary to the preservation of democracy, which are often forgotten when the going is hard. The first requires a mature and steadfast loyalty to common ideals—a loyalty not inspired by sentiment, but founded on deep intellectual conviction.

Among these ideal conceptions are equality before the law, personal liberty, and submission to the will of the majority. Some people, while accepting the benefits of democracy, never resign themselves to its rules. They believe in it so long as it serves their special interests, but hate it when it disagrees with them.

They do not believe in democracy at all, but only in having their own selfish way. They are like the small boy who threatens to take his ball and go home if he can't pitch. Cross them in any matter affecting their purses and they are ready to secede.

Now the strength and safety of democracy is in union. If we were 48 quarrelsome little nations, some greater power would gobble us up one at a time. We keep our freedom because we are many thinking as one.

We argue and quarrel and fight among ourselves, striving to win others to our way of thinking, but these are family fights. In the heat of debate we remain one people. Whether our side wins or loses, it is still our country and we remain loyal to the whole.

Sometimes a minority group, held together by its race, religion or economic status, is made militant by some grievance and invites eventual ruin by forgetting the rules.

In spirit, the members of such a group withdraw from the family. They hate the rest of us. They help their own kind and try to harm everybody else. They boycott others, refuse to co-operate, injure property. They make themselves aliens and enemies of their countrymen.

Acting as a unit gives them early success. But their strength rests on the fact that they still have all the advantages of citizenship in a great free country. In a thousand ways they are helped by the people they hate.

But their hate, and avowed purpose to get what they desire by force and injury, must soon or late arouse an antagonism as bitter as their own, and then they are lost. For a minority cannot whip a majority in any kind of fight. To attempt it is like kicking a sleeping lion.

Our democracy, despite its faults, is striving to correct all injustices. And majority opinion will eventually do it—unless some body kicks the majority's shins once too often.

ONE WORD MORE

From $300 To A Full $10,000 Per Year From where we were sitting we could see the high water in the corn. The river backwater was red with Georgia soil, on the way from the valleys of Hall to the marshes of Glynn.

The sun was going down and the light came filtering through the trees making slanting lines of sun in which seemed to dance the things we call sunbeams.

This was on the farm of a gentleman farmer. He had gone out and bought the farm from a discontented owner who had had a tenant on the farm for a number of years. It was eroded, poor, and in that condition described as "run down."

Now it blooms and blossoms. All the ditches are gone. The once yawning gullies were filled. The plows have made terraces. The fields no longer wash.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Time—marches on!"

The pity is, 'tis true. Our vacation plans are spoiled. A snapper-up of ill-considered trifles has wrecked the beautiful prospect unfolded here the other day of flying back to ancient Rome for golf with Pompey and badminton with Julius Caesar. "When you say that if Howard Hughes had flown from east to west at a speed of 625 miles an hour the sun would have stood still for him and he could have flown around the world at 7 o'clock, you are correct," he advises, "but when you say that by going a little faster he could have finished an hour before he started and that by going considerably faster he might have come back to the Boston Tea Party or the days of Julius Caesar, you make yourself ridiculous. You forget the International Date Line. If Hughes had flown westward with the speed of the sun the time would have remained the same for him all day and night, but when he crossed the date line it would have been another day. He would have returned at the same time he started but the time would have been as of the next day."

This spoils a dawning hope of some day taking part in the Boston Tea Party and listening in on Mark Antony. Unless it is possible, by flying very high, to hop the date line. Or to crash the gate at Bering strait, where the line makes Siberian Mondays of Alaskan Sundays.

Second to none in desire to escape all the taxation that economy, efficiency and honesty in government can save, and in belief that a great saving is possible, we marvel nevertheless at some of the statistical stunts employed to show how awful the tax burden is. There is, for example, the nationally-known corporation which has come forth with figures showing that if all the money it paid in taxes last year were divided among its employees, each employee would have his income increased by some $880. The implication is Good Advice About Constipation!

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with any ailment is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't fiddle with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble. Chances are you won't have to look very far, if you eat just the things most people do. Most likely, you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean just a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft bulky mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is what you lack, your ticket is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the intestinal tonic, vitamin B. Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars!" All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

that the government is preventing these employees from making $880 a year more, when the truth is that nobody knows whether employees would have had anything at all if these taxes, or a part of them, had not been levied to keep the social, political and economic system going.

Placing things end to end, or dividing them by each other, or expressing them in terms of each other are accepted mathematical practice and always bring results. But the results need to be examined to make sure they mean something.

cott (fire inspector) in his place," Hailey charged. Bridges said he had heard it, too, and Councilman Marler asserted he had heard it but knew nothing of any such plan. Bolen and Marler got into a heated argument once as the board considered Carter's punishment in executive session. Bolen criticized Marler for agreeing to a 15-day suspension before the trial was held and Marler flared up. Mayor Hartsfield, after making his motion to discharge Carter, left and was not present when the 60-day suspension was meted out. Three policemen, Lieutenant Allen, J. B. Bishop Jr. and T. J. Sykes, testified at the trial that Carter was "pretty drunk" on the night of July 11 when his car crashed into the automobile of E. Cantor, of a Crew street address, at Irwin street and Boulevard.

Carter was fined. Carter, they said, was fined $52 in recorder's court on charges of drinking and driving. He entered a "not guilty" plea last night. He said he drank some beer.

Cantor testified for Carter, asking clemency. The fire marshal has been a member of the department for 31 1/2 years. He said he had never been before the board on any other charges.

Parker told the firemasters he saw Carter an hour or so after the wreck and that though Carter had been drinking beer, he did not appear drunk. DeFoor, appearing before the board for the third time, admitted he was drinking when he came on duty July 21.

GOOD MORNING

PROTRACTED MEETINGS.
Dr. L. R. Scarborough, president of the Southern Baptist convention and one of the greatest evangelistic preachers of our generation, will come to Druid Hills Baptist church for an eight-day protracted meeting, Sunday, July 31, through Sunday, August 7, preaching every morning at 11 o'clock and every evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. I. E. Reynolds, of Fort Worth, Texas, will lead the singing. Bishop Warren A. Candler will be among the honor guests next Sunday morning and will participate in the service.

Among the grandest traditions in the south are the summer protracted meetings. These evangelistic meetings have prevailed principally in the country churches, due to the fact that farmers find it the best time of the year to lay aside their work for a week and attend meeting. The crops are laid by and it is not yet time to begin harvesting. Another reason why the annual protracted meetings were and are still held in the summer is because of the favorable weather conditions for day and night meetings.

In the Methodist and Baptist churches throughout Georgia and neighboring states there are thousands of protracted meetings in progress today and August. It would be impossible to estimate the good which these meetings have wrought. Many of the church people in our city churches were converted in these old-fashioned meetings in their childhood. They brought their religion to town with them, which accounts for many of the best members of our city churches.

Republican rule. This makes it all the more necessary that we select men, to head our national ticket, who have the confidence of the people and whom, when elected, can be trusted to properly guide the destiny of this great nation.

"Is the Best Man." "Considering all the facts and all the men who have been mentioned as possible candidates in 1940, we believe the best man to carry the Democratic standard in 1940 is Walter F. George, senior senator from Georgia.

"And today, as a life-long Democrat, I would like to nominate Walter F. George for President in 1940."

"And in nominating Senator George for President I am not presenting an unknown man to the nation. In 1928, when the Democratic convention was held in Houston, Texas, Senator George was nominated before the convention and received the second highest vote. Reed, Jones, Hull and Watts, other candidates, received less votes than the Georgian.

"George was placed in nomination by the beloved Georgia congressman, Charles R. Crisp, of the third Georgia district. The nomination of George was followed by an ovation that proved George was held in esteem by the delegates to that convention.

"Had it not been for the well-oiled steam roller of Alfred E. Smith, which rolled over the opposition and brought about the nomination of the New York Governor on the first ballot, George, no doubt, would have been the party nominee for the most important office in the world. And George could have been elected.

"Congressman Crisp in placing the name of Walter F. George before the convention summed up the principles of democracy under five headings:

"Democracy and honesty in public office are synonymous," he declared. "Democracy believes in property rights, but places human rights before materialism, abhors a government by bureaucracy, and believes that government best which least interferes with private initiative and local self government. Democracy is progressive and favors laws that promote the peace, happiness, prosperity and moral development without special favors to any class.

"Democracy will not compromise with error or take a backward step on any moral question. "Democracy believes in law observance and demands the enforcement by the chief executive of every provision of the constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof.

"Democracy will not compromise principle nor yield to expediency. Democracy believes that it is better to suffer temporary defeat and be true to ideals, than to win victory at the sacrifice of principle.

"It follows, therefore, that it is the duty of the party to choose as its standard bearer in the coming contest a candidate whose character and sympathy square with those tenets of the party.

"Senator George, of Georgia, Crisp said, 'fully measures up to those ideals of our party.' "Walter George today is even a greater national figure than he was in 1928. Since that convention he has proved his statesmanship, his sincerity, his ability, and his loyalty to the proven principles of the Democratic party. He has earned the respect of the nation."

"Walter F. George's record is an open book and the more people become acquainted with his record the more they admire and respect this Georgian senator. Walter George as chief executive of our nation would represent all the people and would be guided solely by the ideals of Democracy.

"The old idea that the south cannot furnish a President of the United States is a mistaken one. History shows that a majority of our truly great Presidents came from the south. History shows

125 IN GIRLS' BAND GET COMMISSIONS

Rivers Makes Honorary Presentation and Hears Musicians Play.

Honorary commissions as members of the Georgia Girls' Military band were issued yesterday by Governor Rivers, in ceremonies on the west steps of the state capitol yesterday, to 125 young musicians of Atlanta and vicinity.

The girls' band, directed by H. A. Taylor, gave a concert of several selections following presentation of the commissions. The band was chartered in Fulton county last week as the Atlanta and State Girls' Military Band and sometime ago was "adopted" by Governor Rivers as the state's own musical organization. It is composed of girls from 12 to 22 years of age, living in Atlanta and within a radius of 15 miles of Atlanta.

An invitation to give a concert at Barnesville August 11, on the occasion of the visit there of President Roosevelt, already has been accepted by the band. They played at Griffin last week as a feature of that city's home-coming celebration.

EARLE'S MACHINE ROUTS OPPONENTS

Prepares To Take Over From Grand Jury Inquiry on Governor.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 27.—

(P)—Riding roughshod over a flurry of Republican opposition, Democratic strength today placed the bulk of Governor Earle's program to check a grand jury investigation in position for final consideration in the Pennsylvania house of representatives.

Voting in concert, the big Democratic majority amended and passed on second reading four of five administration measures, designed to take over the projected Dauphin county inquiry of Earle and 13 associates.

A fifth bill—providing that all grand jury investigations of civil officers subject to impeachment be held in public—was withheld and Floor Leader Cohen indicated it might be "pickled."

Earle's chief objective is to force District Attorney Shelley, who is conducting the grand jury inquiry, and former Attorney General Margiotti, who first fired the charges, to divulge their material and make it public. The legislature did not act on United States Senator Guffey's call for impeachment of unnamed Pennsylvania judges. The chairman of the house judiciary general committee said no action would be taken unless charges were brought before the house formally.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: William Ballard, an engineer whose inventions have brought good returns, is worried because his plant and his house in San Francisco are mortgaged to the limit, and the bank may foreclose. He complains to his new friends, whose interest centers in her club work, that he never sees his children unless they want money. Felecity, 24, has just become engaged to Archie Ross. Devereaux Patterson, 19, has just met Paul von Schwering, and thinks only of him. Ben is in college. Mrs. Ballard explains that because of the depression he is not in a position to do so. Ross says Archie will have to go to Scotland before he marries Felecity to see his uncle, who has money to invest. He gives the impression that there has always been some sort of understanding that Archie was to marry his uncle's daughter. Just then Dev Patterson leaves on a year's trip around the world. Ballard calls the family together and brisily, almost flippantly, tells them he has lost everything. He has turned everything over to the bank and it will pay him $1,200 a year while settling his affairs. He is going to a ranch, La Perdita, near Merriwell, on which he has turned over for his use. Anybody who cares to may go along. He says that in his despondent state he may not care to live on. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

through my boyhood; put myself through two years of Princeton and finished up at Stanford. Yes, we had a nice old place there at Morristown.

"If the rain would hold up I'd see if I could get a woman in to clean this whole place thoroughly," Sally Ballard said when the hot food had begun to have its inevitably pacifying effect.

"That's the first thing we must do, if we're to stay here at all. A man to clean the yard and a good woman—two women—in here to clean everything from top to bottom!"

"I don't know why we should hunt up some woman to clean this place," William Ballard said reflectively.

"William, look at it! And it may be weeks before we get your legacy."

"Well, but here we are, Sally, six able-bodied men and women. Why should we send out for another able-bodied man and woman? I believe we could make a pretty good stab at getting this kitchen into shape tomorrow. Tomorrow's Thursday—the funeral isn't until Friday. We could go at it in the morning. There won't be anything complicated about it, just straight-ahead cleaning."

There was another example of strong self-control on the part of the other Ballards when the next morning, after breakfast, the man of the house said briskly, "Well, come on, now, everyone, and let's see what we can do with this kitchen."

Joyce presently was washing the inside of the windows; Dodo crawled about the baseboard, wiping from it the grime of years. Their father worked busily at the sink; whatever the cleaner he used, it had a miraculous effect. Finally the whole family had backed itself out of the room and the first sunshine that the Ballards had seen at La Perdita was shining bright and hot on all the drying cleanliness.

"Sunshine! Mother, come out! But don't step on our floor!" Joyce called in-control, brilliant and warmth of it under the oaks. The yard was a hopeless disorder of rubbish and pools, but the meadows rising beyond the barn were a sea of bright green; roofs sparkled and shone with raindrops, and larks, pouring out their heart-breaking notes, went whirling upward against a blue sky. The mountains rising just behind the ranch toward the west were deep ultramarine, but all the eastern world was bathed in light, and the village, in its smother of rounded oaks and tall eucalyptuses, looked like a newly varnished toy.

"Oh, this is really lovely," Mrs. Ballard had to concede. "Somehow I felt that we never were going to be done with the rain. Oh, this is nice!"

"I always thought farmers lived simple uneventful lives," Ben said. "Getting eggs, milking, feeding stocks, washing things, washing the things you wash the things with, carrying out ashes, carrying in wood, filling lamps, cooking! It's a swell life!"

"You get the flavor of it," his father said hearteningly.

"Oh, that isn't 12 striking in the kitchen!" Joyce said.

"Just 12," her father said ruefully.

"Isn't it the strangest thing that you no sooner do anything," the girl said, "than it's a mealtime and you have to get out the butter and cut bread! Come on, Lissy!"

The kitchen was dry, it looked an entirely different place. The stove had been cleaned of ashes, brushed of soot, blackened. The floor showed something of the boards' original pine white. Through the window panes the sunshine flooded brilliantly.

"Your mother and I will have to drive into San Francisco about 5," William Ballard said. "We'll stay at some hotel and be down as soon as we can. The funeral's at 9 tomorrow."

"Lucky you don't have to go in the rain."

"No; I think the rain's over. They say it was bad for the cherry crop."

"I feel like a real farmer."

"Some day, no matter what Cousin Laura left us, we'll buy you a little place like this, Dad, and let you play with it!" Sally told him generously. She was nervous; Joyce knew she was thinking of the legacy.

"This place, except for the house perhaps, is all right," he said. "We could get a living off it even without the prune crop."

"But all you'd get is just a living," Ben objected.

"Well, that's something. There are a good many men and women in this state who'd be glad of that."

"But this," Sally said quickly, "this isn't living!"

"Food and warmth and shelter."

"Oh well," the wife said patiently. And again her eyes narrowed and she looked into space. What had Cousin Laura left them?

"We'll come back with news," Sally Ballard said in an undertone to her oldest daughter as they started.

The brother, the three sisters, stood watching them out of sight. They all went in together. The night outside was closing in black and chilly, but the kitchen was warm and clean and still faintly, pleasantly scented, with ammonia and wet wood.

"Now I can't wait to get at the closet and the other rooms!" Joyce said.

"The thing I miss," Dodo said when they were at supper, "is having some one like Edna go in and out of your room and put things away. If I drop a sock on the floor now, there it lies until I pick it up. It seems so funny!"

Two kerosene lamps were burning gallantly in the kitchen now, but after the dishes were finished and the place in order, the girls wearily decided against a rubber of bridge, against any effort whatsoever, and carried one lamp into their bedroom for an early finish to the long day. It seemed to Joyce that they had been on the ranch for weeks, for months, yet this was only their third night there. Tired, dirty, yet she was beginning to feel at home, to feel somewhat equal to the demands of cooking, eating, sleeping, that had so overwhelmed them all yesterday.

A second morning dawned through a thick fog; it was 10 o'clock before the sun burst out. During breakfast they talked of Cousin Laura and the will; after breakfast some one suggested that they walk up past the barns to the canyons that forked into the hill to the north and southwest, and get a more comprehensive view of their domain. Joyce got herself into riding breeches, belted on an old leather coat, stepped out into the yard to see a car parked by the oak, and a tall boy beaming at her. Paul!

Continued Tomorrow.

THE LIFE OF JOHN MUIR

IV—In California.

If it had not been for a sick-nervous John Muir's life might have come to an early end. That may seem a strange thing to say, but here are the reasons for saying it: Muir's plan was to go from Florida to Cuba, then to a northwestern part of South America, where he could build a raft and go down one of the branches of the Amazon. He expected to float southward and eastward until he reached the mouth of the Amazon. It was a bold plan, but it was filled with danger. The Amazon valley contains great numbers of deadly snakes. Wild Indians of the region had seldom, if ever, seen a white man, and very likely would have shot the stranger with a poison arrow. Muir might have met the same fate as so many Amazon explorers.

The sickness was a fever which Muir suffered in Florida. It took the heart out of his plans. He did ask about boats to South America, but probably was glad when he found no ship was sailing there in the early future.

Instead of going to South America, he boarded a steamer which took him to the Isthmus of Panama. There was no Panama canal in those days, so he traveled overland across the isthmus and boarded another boat. Then he sailed northward to California.

Muir was 30 years old when he landed in San Francisco. After only one day in the city, he started to explore the wilds of California. Among the places he visited was "Twenty Hill Hollow," and he decided to live there for a time.

"Ground squirrels are the most common animals of the Hollow," he wrote. "They have tunneled their homes in several hills. It is interesting to observe a ground squirrel town in time of alarm. Their one circular street resounds with sharp cries, 'Peep! peep, seek, seek!' Some peep half out of doors, and engage in low, purring chat. Others, on the doorkill or on the rock above, shout as if calling attention to the enemy."

Muir made notes about other animals in California, but his main interest was in the flowers and shrubs, and—above all—the mighty redwood trees. He did more than study nature. He wrote about it as well. Some of his articles were published in magazines, and the payments helped care for the small cost of his living. He also wrote books, one of them called "The Yosemite."

Largely because of his writings, the Yosemite valley was made a national park. He also helped to save redwood forests in other parts of California from being cut down by lumbermen.

Dawsonville Deserts Old Lamps For Bright New Electric Lights

Community, Famous for Lack of Communication Facilities, Heralds Advent of Power Lines as Citizens Look to a More Comfortable Life.

DAWSONVILLE, Ga., July 27.—(AP)—The Georgia community long famous in the state for its lack of telephone and telegraph facilities, this week began reading newspapers by electric lights, and to cook motor.

She sets the news by hand for her paper, makes up her own page forms, runs the paper off the press and mails copies to her subscribers without the aid of so much as a printer's devil.

Meals on electric stoves.

For the first time since this mountainous county was laid out 80 years ago, residents of Dawsonville were relegating lamps and candles to their attics, and enjoying cool drinks and fresh foods kept by electric refrigeration.

There still is no telephone or telephone service, and no electric lights.

The arrival of electric power was on a par with politics, cotton, corn and weather for days before service was turned on. Linemen and service men who rushed the installation of meters and cut-ins said they met the question at every turn "When are you going to turn on the lights?"

tegraph service here—and primary returns must be sent out by messenger the night of September 14—but leading Dawson countians and Georgia Power Company employees who built 23 miles of new rural electric lines celebrated the arrival of power with a picnic the other day.

Veteran Resident Overjoyed.

Dawsonville's postmaster ate his first electrically cooked meal this week and his wife, Mrs. Grady Shoemaker, an assistant in the office of County Agent J. J. DeLay said: "I'm thrilled."

Cyclone and Floods Strike Isarco, Italy

TRENTO, Italy, July 27.—(UP)—A heavy death toll was feared from a cyclonic storm and floods which struck Isarco late today. Ten huts were carried away by flood waters near Barbiano. Numerous workmen constructing a hydro-electric plant slept in the huts, which were enveloped by waters of the river Dilo when it overflowed suddenly.

The Brenner Pass railway, linking Italy and Austria, was flooded, disrupting traffic between Chiasso and Ponte-Isarco.

Guy Lowe and Bert Jackson broke all state records by producing 19,653 crates with a total of 489 1-2 tons of spinach. It was announced at Woodville, Cal.

gricultural Adjustment act of 1938, was unconstitutional in that "congress assumes authority not directly granted by the constitution." The growers asserted tobacco growing is not an interstate industry.

Meanwhile, in telegrams to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, and Congressman Deen requested suspension of tobacco allotments for this season as affects contract growers.

Heavy rains in south Georgia past 10 days have reduced size and quality of tobacco crop. Urgently request suspension of tobacco allotment this season as affects contract growers. Enforced compliance will work hardship and actual suffering. Earnestly urge your favorable consideration this request.

Forms Sent Out. The AAA at Athens said forms for making out preliminary reports for individual growers had been placed with county agents in more than 50 tobacco-producing counties.

The preliminary forms will permit growers to market part of their crop pending completion of the task of making out permanent quota forms. Preliminary cards can be obtained from offices of county agents.

On the eve of first auction sales, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in Washington forecast lower prices than were paid last season.

ENGLAND BLUNTLY WARNS JAPANESE

Centuries-Old Rights Will Be Safeguarded, Lord Halifax Declares.

Italy was an attempt to weaken the Rome-Berlin axis.

"Quite bluntly," he said, "a policy based on the hope of driving a wedge between Berlin and Rome would be as futile as an attempt to divide Paris and London."

Lord Halifax made his statement regarding protection of British interests in China in reply to an attack by Viscount Elibank, Conservative, on Japan's tactics in China as detrimental to Britain's trade.

Lord Elibank called the situation "a notorious scandal." The foreign secretary said:

"The conference in Brussels in November (of signatures) of the nine-power pact to consider possible settlement of the Chinese-Japanese war showed fairly clearly that no agreement is to be expected for any proposal which did in fact mean intervention."

"There is, however, another aspect of events. It is true that the government have had for more than a century important interests in China. The Japanese government claim that the action they are taking is for defense of their interests in China and we have every right to expect them to recognize that if they have certain interests to protect we have the same right to demand of our responsibilities, which we have every intention of discharging."

Lord Elibank had suggested: "I should like to see the governments of the British empire make a plan under which, unless Japan respects our interests in China, we should through import duties and other means reduce her export trade in the British empire to a limit which would make her understand that two can play at that game."

TOKYO URGES PARLEY TO DEFINE BORDER

TOKYO, July 27.—(AP)—The Japanese foreign office spokesman said tonight the "government keenly feels the importance of definitely 'redemarcating' the Manchoukou-Soviet Russian boundary," a long-standing point of friction in the Far East.

At the same time official circles minimized recent border incidents. The war office described the situation as "all quiet now."

The foreign office spokesman, commenting on long-drawn efforts to define the border between Siberia and Manchoukou, Japanese protectorate, asserted the negotiations were stalemated in 1937 when Japan and Russia could not agree on proposals for demarcation.

A dispatch from Hsinking, Manchoukou capital, today said that officials expressed readiness to compromise with Russia over the July 11 Changkufeng incident, the first of three disturbances which brought Russia and Japan to a near-crisis this month.

SUDETENS REJECT PRAHA'S OFFER

PRAHA, July 27.—(UP)—The Sudeten German party of Konrad Henlein, supported by angry German accusations of a "swindle," tonight officially rejected the government's draft of a proposed minority reform statute, published 24 hours ago after weeks of preparation.

The Sudeten Deutsche Presse-briefe, Henlein's party organ distributed among the German minority of 3,500,000, rejected the government's offers on the grounds they do not even approach satisfaction of the Sudeten autonomy demands.

He said the plot was engineered by Mary Kent, another waitress who worked with the Fowler girl at his roadside here and said "they drew matches to see who would do it." It was on the back porch of this combination home and inn that the lad was shot through the heart May 26.

New Trial Sought.

Harry Wilson, a court-appointed defense attorney, filed motion for new trial and Judge Dickerson said he would hear it in Douglas August 20.

Amateur Detective Recovers His Stolen Car

Constitution Staff Photo—Slayton. W. C. Massey, Atlanta automobile salesman, examines a bent fender of his car stolen Friday when two youths held him up. Massey's detective work led to arrest of Herman E. Marques, 21, of a St. Paul avenue address, and Harold Mammos, 17, of an Ada avenue address, by county policemen on charge of highway robbery.

Salesman Turns Sleuth, Finds Car, Aids in Capturing Alleged Robbers

W. C. Massey Knew One of Accused Youths When the Latter Was a Boy, Arrests Follow and Now Two Face Charges of Highway Robbery.

An Atlanta automobile salesman turned detective for a day yesterday by aiding in the capture of two men who allegedly held him up Friday and took his car after posing as prospective customers.

W. C. Massey, the salesman, said he recovered his automobile and established the identity of the two who stuck a gun in his back on Rice street and ordered him to give up the car, later forcing him to get out near Ben Hill.

County Policemen E. D. McGill and J. W. Williams said they arrested Herman E. Marques, 21, of a St. Paul avenue address, and Harold Mammos, 17, of an Ada avenue address, on a charge of highway robbery. The two were held in Fulton tower without bond, the county policemen said.

"I used to know Marques when he was a boy," Massey said yesterday. "In fact, I rented a house to his father. That's how I solved the whole thing. I knew at the time of the robbery I had seen him somewhere but I couldn't remember where it was. Finally, after several sleepless nights, it dawned on me who he really was. Of course, he didn't think I would ever recognize him."

"Then they drove out Rice street," Massey continued, "and the one in the back seat stuck a gun in my back and said, 'This is a stick-up.' Later they carried me out to Ben Hill and let me out in the rain."

The automobile salesman said a friend, F. W. Swain, of 77 Baker street, found the house where Marques lived by posing as a contractor. Massey said he found his car there and then identified the youths as the ones who held him up.

'Hillbilly' O'Daniel To Make Texas A Good Governor--'Chip' Robert

Treasurer of National Democratic Committee Declares Successful Candidate No Clown But a Smart Man With an Idea.

By RALPH MCGILL.

Lee (Paw the Bait, Pappy) O'Daniel is one of those smart men with an idea.

He will make Texas a good Governor.

So thinks L. W. (Chip) Robert, treasurer of the National Democratic committee, who is the first Atlantian to have a visit with the nation's new political sensation.

Mr. Robert visited O'Daniel in Fort Worth on Tuesday after Elliott Roosevelt had arranged an interview.

"This fellow," said Robert, "is not a clown. Not by any means. That stuff he used, the hillbilly songs and all the crazy songs he wrote, were ballyhoo. He admitted that. He told me he had no idea of being Governor. He had been putting on a radio program to advertise his flour. He has a great flour business."

Elected Without Run-off.

"One night he said something about being tired of professional politicians and asked, mostly in jest, what the people thought about him running for Governor. When 55,000 people replied he decided it no longer was humorous. But rather serious."

It was O'Daniel, running on a platform which contained the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments, a promise of $30 per month to every person 65 years old or over; less taxes and fewer politicians, was nominated. That means victory in Texas.

"Don't forget," said Chip Robert, "that this was the first time in all the history of Texas as a state that a Governor ever was elected without a run-off. This fellow beat them all by enough to win on the one ballot."

"He twice was president of the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce. That ought to indicate he is a rather successful business man and one with the respect of his fellow citizens. I was very favorably impressed with him and believe he will make a great Governor for Texas. The people all are for him."

No Rebuff to New Deal.

Chip Robert, former assistant secretary of the treasury and an alumnus of Georgia Tech, said he did not consider the elections in Texas a rebuff to the New Deal. All the candidates, he said, were running on New Deal platforms.

"As a matter of fact," said Robert, "you can consider O'Daniel's election a very real triumph for democracy. The people voted for him. Don't think of him as a clown. He is a shrewd business man and he ought to make a good Governor. I imagine he will be able, with social security, to pay the $30 pensions."

Mae and "would do anything for her."

He told the court he tried to dissuade the pair and that Verna Mae told him to "shut your damn mouth."

After sentencing the convicted man, Judge Dickerson sent to the county of ordinary the disposal of $468 paid in by the insurance company on the boys' life.

Fire Destroys Dock, Damage $4,000,000

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 27.—(UP)—Fire late today destroyed the Canadian Pacific Steamship Company's Pier D, the longest dock on the Vancouver waterfront, with damage estimated officially at $4,000,000.

Four firemen, including Captain J. Bowring, were injured. The Empress of Russia, 22,000-ton luxury liner which operates between Vancouver and the Orient, was endangered for a time. She was berthed at a near-by pier to which the wind carried embers but none set it afire.

the public" and suggested amendments which would "observe the traditional requirements of fair play, guarantee an impartial hearing, and give to the employer and employee alike the right of presenting complaints."

The association took time today to express its sympathy for the taxpayer and the tax collector. It adopted a resolution which said:

"The American Bar Association, recognizing that when an income tax law, or important parts of it, can be understood only by an expert, there result serious difficulties in collecting the taxes due under it, hereby instructs the committee on federal taxation to co-operate with the authorities in searching for ways of eliminating such provisions from existing income tax law and of avoiding inclusion of such provisions in the future."

TVA AIDE CHARGES INTENSE GRILLING

Clerk Testifies He Became Physically Ill, Had To See Physician.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 27.—(AP)—Testimony about missing TVA minutes brought a statement today from a young file clerk he had been accused of lying by two TVA attorneys and questioned so intensely had become physically ill.

Before a congressional investigation committee, Frank T. Daffner, chief clerk to the board secretary, named James Lawrence Fly, TVA general counsel, and Herbert Marks as the two attorneys who quizzed him.

Fly later denied calling Daffner a liar.

The incident occurred last spring, Daffner said, when it was found certain original copies of board minutes were missing, about the same time that Charles Hoffman, assistant secretary to the board, made a trip to Dayton, Ohio, to see Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, a depositor chairman of the Authority.

Minutes Changed.

The minutes were those of a meeting November 2, 1933, in which certain changes were made. TVA Director David E. Lilienthal termed the changes "perfectly proper."

Daffner said he was asked when he last saw the copies of the minutes, and that he replied he saw one of four original copies in an office safe (previous testimony had shown three of the originals have not yet been located).

The witness quoted Fly as saying, "It's a lie, you gave that one to A. E. Morgan."

During the course of the questioning, Daffner said, he was repeatedly accused of lying.

Representative Wolpert, Republican, New Jersey, asked "What was your condition after those conferences?"

He replied he was "physically exhausted" and required the services of a physician.

Senator Erazier, Republican, North Dakota, asked Daffner if Fly ever apologized "for calling you a liar."

Before the witness could answer, Fly leaped to his feet and asked permission to take the stand.

"At the time I questioned him (Daffner), he was in an overwrought condition as he is here today. I did not tell Daffner he was lying. I did tell him not to evade the issue and to come forth and give me the facts on the information sought."

"Mr. Marks also did not tell him he was lying. Our persistence in questioning him was only called for by his constant evasion of the questions we asked."

Testifying earlier, Fly had accused Dr. Morgan of "unwarranted interference" in the 18-company power suit at Chattanooga last winter.

He termed Dr. Morgan's conduct "highly questionable" and said "apparently he was trying to take charge of the case... by trying to influence witnesses..."

U. S. LAWS TO AID RAILS CRITICIZED

CLEVELAND, July 27.—(AP)—Government laws for reorganization of financially harassed railroads were termed "complicated and ineffective" by Colonel Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, Va., in a talk today before the public utilities section of the American Bar Association.

"The real solution is economic rather than legal," said Anderson, receiver for the Seaboard Air Line railroad.

Anderson termed Section 77 of the federal bankruptcy act "so complicated no one can do anything under it to solve the problem."

PENSION ADVOCATE, 25, WINS OVER VETERAN

DALLAS, Texas, July 27.—(AP)—The Texas election bureau today said complete returns from the third congressional district showed Representative Morgan Sanders, veteran member of the house, had been unseated.

Twenty-five-year-old Lindley Beckworth, advocate of old-age pension increase and staunch admirer of President Roosevelt, and Brady Gentry, Smith county judge, will meet in the run-off August 17.

Final totals were: Beckworth, 14,096; Gentry, 13,439, and Sanders, 13,242.

Pacific Ocean Borders Front Yard of Atlanta Bride

Sara Simms Edge Describes Life In Hawaiian Isle in Glowing Terms

By Sally Forth.

INTERESTING news of Atlantans residing in Hawaii has been received in letters sent via the famous China Clipper by a recent bride and groom, Ensign and Mrs. Lawrence Edge, whose marriage was a social event of last month. The bride is the former Sara Simms, attractive daughter of Mrs. A. B. Simms, of this city, and, with her husband, is residing on Waikiki Beach.

Sara has written home glowing accounts of her arrival at Pearl Harbor in Hawaii and says that when the boat docked she and her husband were showered with colorful leis, the traditional welcome to the Hawaiian Islands. When they finally reached the shore they had more than 40 of the colorful floral tributes around their necks.

The young couple is residing with another navy couple in a spacious and picturesque home on the beach. In fact, the Pacific ocean is just 10 feet from their door. The ocean-side property was once owned by the famous Robert Louis Stevenson, and the handsome residence which now stands on the land is the one which was selected for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor for their proposed visit to the island.

Ensign and Mrs. Edge plan to move into their own apartment within a few weeks, and will be honored at affairs to welcome them into the naval circles in Hawaii. Ensign Edge is detailed to the U. S. submarine Narwhal, one of the largest in Uncle Sam's fleet.

Among those forming the "welcoming committee" for Lawrence and Sara was that popular Atlantant, Edith Kendrick, who has spent the past year at Schofield Barracks in Honolulu with her brother and sister, Captain and Mrs. C. B. Irwin. The latter, it is recalled, is the former Jean Kendrick, daughter of Mrs. William J. Kendrick and the late Colonel Kendrick, U. S. A. Mrs. Kendrick resides here now and makes her home with another daughter, Mrs. Channing Whitman, on Habersham way.

Edith is a popular member of the younger set in Honolulu and writes that one of the "best parties of the year" was held recently. In addition to Edith, Atlantans present were Captain and Mrs. William Saffarans, Lieutenant Philip Gage and Reverdy Clarke. Mrs. Saffarans is the former Douglass Paine, and Phil Gage was really adopted by Atlanta during the residence here of his parents, Colonel and Mrs. Phillip Gage, who are now in Charleston. His sister, the former Betty Gage, is Mrs. Doreux Lippitt Jr. and resides here. Reverdy Clarke has made his home in Honolulu for several years, having gone out to visit his brother, Lieutenant Christian H. Clarke Jr., during the latter's detail there. When Lieutenant Clarke recently was transferred to Fort Stevens in Chicago, Reverdy remained on the islands.

When the Nieuw Amsterdam weighs anchor in New York harbor on August 16, and steams past the Statue of Liberty, prominent Atlantans will be listed among the passengers bound for Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Philip Alston and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Alston will form a congenial family group aboard the steamer, which docks at Boulogne-Sur-Mer. Making the voyage aboard the same ship will be Mr. and Mrs. Strother Fleming; their son, Strother Fleming Jr., and Mrs. Hugh Scott.

The boat train will take the Atlantans to Paris, where they will spend several days sight-seeing in the French capital. Leaving Paris, the itinerary of the Atlantans takes them to London. They will spend a week there and take motor trips to interesting places in England. Their return passage is engaged aboard the S. S. Statendam which sails from Southampton late in September.

During the absence of Mrs. Robert Alston in Europe, her Andrews drive home will be occupied by Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Wilmer, of Tampa, Fla. Dr. Wilmer, to the delight of his former congregation, will preach at St. Luke's church all during August.

THAT beloved pioneer citizen, J. R. Mobley, has leased a cottage at Highlands, N. C., for the month of August, and members of his family will be his guests. Mrs. Sims Bray departs on Saturday for the North Carolina resort to enjoy the hospitality of her father, and she will be joined over the week ends by her son, Sims Bray Jr. Mrs. Dossa M. Robinson, niece of Mr. Mobley, will be his guest also while he occupies the cottage at Highlands.

Mrs. Raymond Demere and her son, Raymond Jr., Robert and Charles, who reside in Savannah, will spend many happy hours with Mr. Mobley during the family reunion. Miss Julia Jenkins Ragin Weds Mr. Sullivan at Home Ceremony

Miss Julia Jenkins Ragin, daughter of Mrs. Asa G. Candler, became the bride of Hardy Alexander Sullivan, of Winter Garden, Fla., at a ceremony taking place yesterday at high noon at the home of the bride on Springdale road.

Rev. Stuart Oglesby, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, performed the impressive ceremony in the presence of members of the immediate family and a few close friends. The musical program was rendered by Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, who played harp selections prior to and during the ceremony.

Improvised Altar.
The improvised altar was arranged before the mantelpiece in the living room where the ceremony took place. The mantelpiece was banked with Easter lilies and ferns. A graceful arrangement of Cydonium ferns formed the background for the altar, which was flanked by white trellis garlanded with smilax. Pedestal baskets held Easter lilies and seven-branched candleabra held white tapers. The aisle through which the bridal party approached the altar was formed by white posts topped with bouquets of Easter lilies tied with white satin ribbon bows and streamers.

Mrs. L. C. Stafford, of Memphis, Tenn., twin sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her gown was made of rose-tinted mouline de soire, posed over tulle and the bodice featured a V-neckline, puffed sleeves and the skirt graduated in fullness from the waistline to the hem. She wore a becoming poke of rose-colored braid trimmed with rose-tinted gardenias and tied beneath her chin with velvet ribbon to match the hat. She carried a bouquet of pink gardenias and blue delphinium.

Lovely Bride.
The lovely bride was given in marriage by her uncle, W. C. Ragin, with whom she entered the living room. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, L. C. Stafford, of Memphis, Tenn., brother-in-law of the bride. Her beauty was enhanced by her wedding gown of ivory-tinted tulle lace posed over ivory slipper satin. The gown was fashioned in empire style introducing a gathered bodice and a heart-shaped neckline centered with a cluster of orange blossoms. The puffed sleeves were shirred in the center to produce the butterfly effect, and a row of tiny satin-covered buttons extended in the back of the bodice from the neck to the waistline. The long skirt widened at the hemline to form the circular skirt.

The ivory-tinted tulle veil was fastened to her hair with an empire-style cap made of rolls of tulle finished with a narrow band of valley lilies. Valley lilies composed the exquisite bouquet which was cascaded with valley lilies and tied with ivory-tinted satin ribbon.

Mrs. Asa G. Candler, mother of the bride, wore navy blue sheer, the bodice being made of white lace. She wore a wide-brimmed navy hat and accessories to match, and a shoulder bouquet of orchids. The groom's mother, Mrs. Jerry M. Sullivan, of Winter Garden, Fla., was gowned in white crepe. Her hat and accessories matched her costume, and she wore orchids on her shoulder.

After the ceremony Mrs. Candler was hostess at a breakfast. The bride's table was centered with an arrangement of all-white flowers. Mrs. Broyles Brown assisted in entertaining.

Leave by Motor.
Mr. Sullivan and his bride left by motor for a wedding trip to California. Mrs. Sullivan traveled in a modish ensemble, the dress being of brown sheer and the fitted jacket of beige. Her smart hat was of brown and her accessories of brown. She wore a shoulder spray of orchids. At the conclusion of their honeymoon, the young couple will reside in the north.

Out-of-town guests present for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, the bridegroom's parents, from Winter Garden, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Ostiolet, of Winter Garden; Mr. and Mrs. Paul

Barbara Stanwyck Collapses, Is Threatened With Pneumonia

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD, July 26.—Barbara Stanwyck complained last Friday that she did not feel very well, and asked could she go home. She went home, and Director Leigh Jason rearranged his schedule of "The Mad Miss Manton" and "shot" around his star. The next morning, Barbara's doctor informed the studio she was threatened with pneumonia. The director disbanded his company, as Miss Stanwyck's presence was required for every remaining scene in the picture. Monday morning, the actress reported for work, and collapsed at noon. She is now home under care of doctors and nurses, and will be there at least a week.

The cost for production holdup is $5,000 a day. Fortunately RKO-Radio has an insurance policy covering the entire loss. Other studio are not as lucky. Fredric March's sickness, while making "There Goes My Heart," cost $20,000, of which 50 per cent was debited from Hal Roach, who, according to the terms of his insurance policy, must pay the first $10,000 lost in production delay.

Dorothy Parker and Husband Alan Campbell have finally completed the script for "Sweethearts," and their contract with Metro. The couple are now working for Walter Wanger and "Trade Winds," to be directed by Tay

CO Gas Causes Many Heart Attacks

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

Can't take the space here to discuss the question of contamination or pollution of air with the colorless, odorless but deadly carbon monoxide gas and its effects on health. That is discussed in some detail in the booklet, "How to Breathe." For a copy send 20 cents coin and stamped envelope bearing your address. Suffice to say here that carbon monoxide is not a true poison—it does not injure the cells or tissues of the body; all of its effects are due to anoxia—absence of oxygen, which the carbon monoxide crowds out of the blood and tissues. It must be remembered that some cells cannot survive deprivation of oxygen for even a few seconds. The after-effects of gassing with CO in cases where recovery occurs are due entirely to the damage or destruction of some of the cells, which can never be replaced or renewed.

Angina pectoris frequently occurs in pernicious anemia, and today the immediate cause of the attack is well recognized as anoxia or anoxemia. Clinically one of the best emergency remedies for angina pectoris, whether the patient also has pernicious anemia or not, is oxygen. This may be administered by inhalation if the attack does not too greatly restrict the breathing; or it may be injected subcutaneously in the flank or under the breast—pure oxygen gas so injected is quickly absorbed into the blood and may give far better results in desperate cases than mere inhalation.

Angina pectoris occurring in cases of pernicious anemia has been reported in numerous cases unaccompanied by any evident anoxemia or disease of the coronary arteries—which makes it the more certain that the attack is due to anoxia of the myocardium—lack of oxygen in the muscle of the heart wall.

Drs. Harvey Beck and George Suter recently reported five cases of a girl in pectoris due to CO anoxia. One was that of a farmer and cattle dealer aged 36 years, whose home was heated by burning gas from his own gas well. Gas escaped from a defective heater in his bedroom. When the doctor ordered that windows be kept open for protection, and the burner adjusted and proper pipe connecting with the flue installed to carry products of combustion out of the house, the patient made a remarkably complete recovery symptoms clearing up completely.

A toll bridge operator had suffered from CO anoxia for several years and recently heart attacks. Some 18,000 autos idled engines while pausing at his window to pay toll daily. Vacations spent away from exposure to carbon monoxide brought relief from the heart attacks.

Chemical tests of the blood show how much carbon monoxide saturation there may be. The toll bridge man when on duty showed a monoxide saturation of 27 per cent.

Barbara Bell Porch and Garden Frocks

A PRETTY PORCH AND GARDEN FROCK.

Doesn't this piquant little day frock strike you as much too attractive to spend all its time in the kitchen? You'll be wearing it for shopping, gardening, and to serve impromptu porch luncheons and Sunday night suppers. This design is such an adaptable style, too. Anybody between sizes 14 and 42 can wear it successfully.

The lines of this dress are crisp and slim, but not too tight to work in. The slightly flared skirt, easy waistline and short sleeves give you plenty of freedom for action.

Make up this pattern in percale, calico or gingham—or better still in all three; it's much too wearable and pretty to be limited to just one making! Be sure to trim it with ricrac as sketched, at the edges of the sleeves, the round gathered pockets, and the saucy neck-bow.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1578-B is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 4 3/4 yards of 35-inch material, 3 3/4 yards ricrac to trim.

'Balanced Diet' Reducing Aids Health, Improves Looks

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

Reducing got a bad reputation some years ago when the movie stars risked their lives on diets designed solely to make them lose weight. The results were so alarming that some of you are still afraid to reduce because of a possible health penalty.

It is dangerous, of course, to attempt to reduce until you are 10 to 20 pounds under the weight that is normal for you. It is even more dangerous when the diet followed lacks practically everything you need to keep well, and some of the old-time diets were so fantastic that we wonder how anyone could think them up, let alone persuade anyone else to adopt them!

Some of the sanest people, however, go on the queerest diets. They reason that in order to get thin, the main thing is not to eat. But that is no way to look at it. Don't "go on a diet to reduce." You will do better to leave out of the menus the foods which put on excess weight. The foods which should be restricted are the fuel foods—primarily the fats, sugars and starches.

Your bodily requirement of protein, minerals and vitamins is exactly the same as if you were not trying to reduce. You must have a balanced diet, with all the foods needed for the maintenance of vitality and the repair of body tissues. These are really "protective" foods and your health does not suffer on daily reducing menus consisting of lean meat, eggs, skim milk or buttermilk, fresh fruits and vegetables, and a restricted amount of whole grain bread and butter.

Those are the foods that keep you healthy and you need every one of them. Unless your diet supplies the food elements to make good the daily wear and tear, these elements are taken from the body's vital tissues, and your well being is seriously endangered.

Now, can't you see how important it is that your reducing program be carefully planned? You should feel and look better than ever for your reducing, and you can if you follow a balanced diet with weight loss limited to two pounds per week, and do not try to reduce below normal weight.

It is no favor to your health to continue dragging around 40 to 50 pounds of excess weight, but do be a little cautious about your reducing program. Before you adopt any diet ask yourself, "Do these menus contain everything I need for health?"

You Can Be a Popular Dancer By Perfecting Steps at Home

BEFORE AND AFTER THEIR HOME LESSONS.

John and Joan—dancing unhappily together because no one else will dance with them!

And a few weeks later—enjoyed John and Joan doing the tricky rumba with grace and ease. Home lessons with simple instructions and diagrams have showed them how.

Most clumsy dancing, they found, is due to bad posture. How girls dread the man who leans stiffly backward. They can't tell when he'll take forward steps and they can never get from under his feet in time!

And how men dread the girl who drapes herself on her partner's chest, has to be pushed around like a sack of meal. If she only could see the way she looks to the stag line!

Dance erect—but relaxed! Keep the weight evenly balanced on the balls of the feet.

Easy to give a forward lead with a forward motion of the body. And the girl who's light on her feet, who knows the trick of long backward steps, needn't fear the menacing feet of any partner.

As for smart dance steps, you can quickly learn them from diagrams. Try the basic rumba diagram shown in the picture.

On 1, step to the left with the left foot. And close with the right foot. 2, step forward with the left and pause.

With a little practice you can do it real rumba style—away from one foot to the other.

Other popular steps you learn as easily. Our 40-page booklet, Social Dancing Self-Taught, diagrams basic steps and variations for waltz, tango, rumba, fox-trot, Swing, Suzy-Q, truckin'. A complete home course by a well-known teacher.

Speak Kindly, Don't Scold Children

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Dear Miss Chatfield: This is not the sour complaint of a childless couple. We have known a father's and mother's love although death took our only child. We are having a difficult time with our neighbors' children. They trample our flowers and vegetables and on several occasions we have seen them peeping in our windows after dark. In other words, they make themselves a general nuisance. When I hear parents talking about loving their children I always wonder if it is blind or wide-awake love. Our neighbors love in the blind way, for they see no faults in their youngsters, never correct them and go off and leave them to annoy us. If we should complain to these parents and tell them what their children are up to, they wouldn't believe us and it's doubtful if they could do anything about it. The only result would be unpopularity for us. Can't you tell us how to deal with this vexing business?

MR. AND MRS. D.

Answer: Simply enough you and your husband should go after the children, not their parents; go after them with kind words and bids to friendship. Only in this way can you put an end to the depredations and still remain in the good graces of your neighbors. I should think a childless couple would welcome the opportunity of close association with youngsters near by.

A child, you know, is as responsive to evidences of friendliness as a good motor to a step on the gas. Invite him to conversation and he will talk his head off, and yours. Compliment him on his good behavior and he will sprout wings while you wait. Ask his interest and co-operation in any undertaking, whether it be slaying on his side of the fence, bathing the dog, working the garden or cutting the grass, and it's yours for the asking.

After you have made friends with the young marauders (lemons and cookies recommended as best bait) you will discover that your flowers and vegetables will be quite safe from their feet and the only trouble you will have thereafter will be getting the youngsters from under your feet.

My own garden lies between two homes where a big bunch of wild Indians gather to play ball, shoot up the works and tear up the earth. If by chance a stray ball speeds through the hedge and lands in my border, they are as careful as cats in extracting it. Never once has any of them trampled a plant or broken a blossom.

Stripping Hand Is Problem In Squeeze

BY HAROLD SHARPSTEEN

One of declarer's chief problems in preparing for a squeeze play is to strip adversary's hand of its "busy" control cards. The number of straight winning leads needed to reach the squeeze position is determined by deducting adversary's predetermined "busy" cards from the number of tricks remaining to be played. This is a problem of simple mathematics.

If at the opening lead, declarer finds adversary must retain three "busy" cards, he deducts three from 13. Declarer must win 10 uninterrupted tricks to reach the squeeze position. . . the eleventh trick. If adversary's busy cards are four in number declarer must win nine consecutive tricks to reach the squeeze position. . . with five "busy" cards assumed to be with one opponent, declarer must win eight straight tricks to reach the squeeze position.

Straight Leads Required.

Then, by applying the X-minus-one formula, declarer is also reminded that when he arrives at the squeeze position, in order to actually press the squeeze through, he must still hold (three) minus one winner. . . one winner being the squeeze-lead card upon which adversary will be forced to discard one of his (three) "busy" cards. . . and one more winner which will be at the top of declarer's remaining two-card squeeze suit.

North—S, A J 4; H, 7 4 3 2; D, 4 3; C, A 10 6 4.

West—S, K Q 7; H, 5; D, Q 9 8; C, K Q J 9 3.

South—S, 10 3; H, A K Q J 10 8 6; D, A K 2; C, 2.

Protect One Loser.

West opens the Club King and South's contract is seven hearts. There is no place to put the five of spades. South looks for a squeeze possibility by counting the busy cards one definite opponent must hold for the squeeze to succeed. . . One club to prevent North's 10 from winning and two spades to cover North's ace-jack. . . three "busy" control cards in all.

Deducting three from 13, declarer must win 10 straight tricks to reach his squeeze position and then have three minus one or two winners still remaining in his hand. . . one the squeeze lead card. . . the other the top of his two-card squeeze suit. . . the Ace with the Jack of spades.

Now see if you can strip West's hand of all but his three "busy" cards and go on through the squeeze.

White House Family MY DAY: Enjoys Aquatic Games

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—I am gradually accumulating a collection of pottery from different parts of the country. The tea set, presented to me in the pottery shop in Blacksburg, W. Va., reached me safely a few days ago, and the shade of blue against our pine wood panelling is really lovely. Another piece of pottery came to me from Ohio, a most spirited horse with some, sweet little animals taking refuge around him.

I haven't quite grasped yet why the package in which it arrived bore a label: "Wind in the Willows." Whether this name refers to the color or the subject is still a mystery to me, but any way, I like it and it occupies a place of honor in my living room.

Two daughters of a friend of ours are staying with us. Their home is in California and I am afraid we teased them a great deal about the well known California habit of thinking their section of the country the only part of the United States where one can possibly live. It is a joy to play games with young people, and yesterday afternoon they all played a game in the pool which necessitated swimming under a whole line of legs. Great hilarity ensued all around, particularly when the larger people found it difficult to get through—and so upset the whole line.

We were just sitting down to another game last evening when Captain Reybold appeared. He starts for the west in a few days and it is a joy to see him again before he leaves.

This morning, after breakfast, I bade everybody goodby and started off for Philadelphia. I will get there in the early afternoon and I am quite excited at the thought of seeing this new grandchild and his mother and father. When I called up last evening to find out if it would be convenient for me to come, Franklin Jr. said he was reading aloud, so I am going to pick out the most amusing book I have and take it with me. There are certain things which are doubly enjoyed when they are read aloud.

The real news, however, is that the baby is to be named Franklin D. Roosevelt III. That will certainly please his grandfather.

In glancing through the newspapers yesterday I noticed a little item which seemed to me of great importance. So many people have believed that from the financial standpoint Puerto Rico had more problems to solve than any other part of the United States. This item announces that the revenues last year in the island have risen to the highest point they ever have attained. I hope this means greater prosperity for the mass of the Puerto Rican people. Better wages, better sanitation and better education will add much to the standard of living of the people as a whole.

A Small House Should Have Special Decorating Treatment

By ELIZABETH McRAE BOYKIN.

Helen's house doesn't look so special from the road—a low board-over looking white clap-board with blue shutters is set back in trees with quite a lovely lawn stretching out and down a little slope. In fact it's the lawn and the trees that you stop to admire. Once inside, though, the house itself begins to dawn on you. For Helen has really done things to it, using mostly her own ingenuity in place of a fancy bank roll to get her effects.

Gaining Dignity.

Being a little house, it gains dignity and spaciousness by being painted white throughout. All the curtains are white too—point d'esprit with full wide ruffles—Helen made them herself to get the extra inches in them. The floors throughout are covered in a plain soft blue linoleum kept waxed—because the old floors in the house weren't good.

But don't think the house is monotonous just because the backgrounds are the same. Her old maple furniture in the living room Helen bleached down till it's practically a platinum blonde. Then she slip-covered the sofa and two easy chairs in dusty pink quilted cotton, added pink pottery lamp bases with white shades, a pink tea set and a row of flower prints for the wall, and there you have a room that's both naive and sophisticated at the same time.

For Accent.

The dining room furniture, also bleached, also got a bleach, but here chair cushions were in a faded blue denim—the same color the corner cupboards were painted inside. And for accent a set of dishes in maroon pottery gave the two blues and the white a subtle chic.

Helen's room has an old bed-room set painted pink and used with white rag scatter rugs, white crocheted bedspread, two small armchairs in flowered chintz.

The guest room has walnut furniture, a blue and white appliqued bedspread, an armchair in maroon, two oval hooked rugs in floral patterns.

This is another small house that's been planned as a unit instead of making each room too independent of the others.

The trip will be made to Vogel State Park in the beautiful Chatahoochee National Forest and tentative dates of August 9 and 10 have been set. Interesting Programs Fill Days Of Camp Fire Girls at Camp Toccoa

"Christmas" at camp was an unusual feature at the Camp Fire Girls' Camp at Toccoa last week. Sunday evening was "Christmas Eve." Omitting none of the Christmas spirit and festivity, the campers hung up stockings, decorated a tree in the lodge, and sang carols.

Christmas Day was celebrated in true style with a festive dinner that included the usual plum pudding and roasted chicken. After supper everyone attended the gay Christmas party where presents were given to each camper. These gifts had been made during the week in the handicraft and needle departments by the campers themselves. A highlight of the program was a modern version of "The Night Before Christmas" written by Betty Withers and Louise Wadsworth. The reading was entitled, "Masterpiece Completed at Midnight."

A candle-lighting ceremony concluded the program. The children sang carols as they returned with lighted candles to their cabins.

The Vagabonds left yesterday for a three-day trip to Lakemont. These girls have reached the highest rank in camp craft, and their visit to Lakemont is an annual event of the camp season. The remaining campers will join them Friday afternoon to bring the hikers back to Toccoa. The group will be chaperoned by Ruth Slack and Betty Withers, camp craft counselors.

Last evening was the weekly baseball night. The two younger villages competed against the senior unit and the counselors. This evening Yoki village entertained at a party for the younger girls in Omikse.

"Chinese Day" is an event looked forward to on this week's list of activities. Chop suey, rice and other Chinese dishes will be served with the omission of the chop sticks. Campers' names will be changed to such titles as "One Lone Lung," "Wang Chain Gang," et cetera.

Miss Catherine Sherard, director, will take the swimming staff to Camp Dixie Friday for the aquatic conference being held there. The staff includes Beth Belser, in charge of the water-front; and Mary Cole, Jane Johnson, Francis Fryer, assistants. On Tuesday Miss Sherard, Miss Curtin, and Mrs. Thelma Colley will attend a directors' at Camp Sequoyah. Miss Curtin is unit director of Omikse village, and Mrs. Colley of Yoki.

A number of books were given to the camp library last week. The books were the only admission charged to the production of "H. M. S. Pinafore" given by the camp. Two performances of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta were presented under the supervision of Mary Morgan Duggan, Fern and Mary Steuville. New scenery and stage curtains were made for the production by Mary Jane Wilson, Frances Baker and Mrs. Thelma Colley.

The climatic event of the season will be a nature council fire to be held August 6 at the council ring. The theme is to be "Creation," and dances, choral speaking, and anthems will be included on the program. Maybith Carithers will be in charge of the dancing, and Mary Morgan Duggan will direct the choral speaking. Mrs. Coley will supervise the decorating and the entire program.

First '2-Club' Golf Tourney Starts Sunday at Piedmont Park

UNUSUAL AFFAIR TO BE SPONSORED BY CONSTITUTION

All Amateurs Eligible to Enter; Only Two Clubs May Be Used.

By JACK TROY.
A two-club golf tournament, with qualifying to begin Sunday and continue through the week, will be sponsored by The Constitution at the Piedmont Park Golf Club.

Arrangements were made yesterday with Chick Ridley, pro, who Tuesday defeated Bobby Dodd at Capital City, using two clubs to Dodd's one, to have qualifying from Sunday through Saturday and to start match play the following Sunday.

The tournament is to be confined strictly to amateur players. Any amateur is eligible to participate.

NO CHANGES.
Players will be allowed to choose any two clubs they desire, but there can be no changing after the qualifying round. The original clubs of a player's choice must be used from start to finish.

It will not be permissible to "ring in" a board, such as Ridley used in his match with Dodd. Ridley has a copyright on this idea. It saved him from shanking and he is figuring on framing it. The board, that is, not the idea.

It has been suggested that all Ridley would have to do to frame the idea is to wear his hat at all times.

At any rate, qualifying will begin on Sunday. Entries must be made to Ridley at the Piedmont club. An entry fee of 50 cents will be assessed.

NO CADDIES.
The tournament is one of an economical nature, since it will not be necessary for entrants to hire caddies. It's no trouble at all to carry your own clubs in a tournament of this nature.

Play, according to present plans, will be in flights of eight. There will be trophies for individuals.

The Atlanta Crackers move into New Orleans today for what amounts to the biggest and most important series of the year.

The Crackers have a good lead, but the Pels, up and going, are in second place and making a determined bid to take over the driver's seat.

This is the sort of race that featured the 1913 Southern league pennant fight which was won by Billy Smith's club. The difference then was that New Orleans, in last place, won the pennant for Atlanta. That's right. New Orleans and Chattanooga each played a big part in winning it for the Crackers.

Can you imagine such a thing? Well, I can't. But the old-timers not only can, but do. They remember all the details and the fact that when the Pels beat the Mobile Gulls in the final game of the 1913 season to give the idle Crackers the pennant by half a game, the Crackers fans sent a purse to Finis Wilson, the pitcher, and Tim Hendrix, the outfielder, who scored four of the runs in the 5-to-2 victory. Charley Frank wired his thanks.

The Crackers of today and the Crackers of 1913 must be out of somewhat the same mould as to spirit. For, after they had clinched the pennant, President Callaway, in presenting each player a bonus of $75 as a token of appreciation of the board of directors, said:

"We are all of the same opinion, that the Atlanta baseball club is the gamest crowd of baseball players that ever put a foot on a Southern league diamond." Somehow you wonder what President Callaway would think of the 1938 Crackers, who have done everything but move mountains to take over the lead.

Anyway, that 1913 race was very intriguing. Some of the details may be interesting. . . .

WON 19 OUT OF 21.

When the Crackers of '13 started their drive they were in third place and seven and one-half games back of the Mobile Gulls, the league leaders.

During their drive they won 19 out of the last 21 games and tied the Gulls for the league lead. The Crackers defeated Chattanooga, 5 to 0, on the last day of the season while Mobile defeated New Orleans. Finis Mobile still had one game to play with New Orleans. Finis

QUALIFYING SET TODAY IN MEET AT COLUMBUS

Yates and Barnes Tie in Exhibition With Kirkland, Waddell.

COLUMBUS, Ga., July 27.—The 18-hole exhibition golf match pitting Charlie Yates and Tommy Barnes against the local team of Dan Kirkland and Elliott Waddell ended all-square this afternoon.

The contest, played under a boiling sun before the eyes of a gallery of 350, was staged on the eve of the 15th annual Columbus Country Club Invitation tournament.

The match turned all-square. They halved the par 4 tenth. Kirkland-Waddell went one up on the 11th as Kirkland shot a birdie three. They halved the 12th. Barnes and Yates came back to win the 13th as Barnes shot a birdie four. Kirkland broke par with a three on the 14th to go one up. Barnes sank a beautiful 50-foot shot on the 15th to even the match. The next three holes were halved.

Yates' driving and approach shots were beautiful but he was off on his putting. Barnes showed unusually good chip shooting. Neither of the members of the foursome were particularly brilliant.

Yates had 37-37-74. Kirkland carded a 39-35-74. Barnes turned in a 38-35-73. Waddell posted a 40-37-77. Par is 34-37-74.

The 18 holes of qualifying play will be held Thursday morning and afternoon. First round of match play is set for Friday morning with the second round due Friday afternoon. Semi-finals will be held Saturday morning. Finals are slated Saturday afternoon.

Dan Kirkland will defend his championship. Tommy Barnes will offer the most serious challenge. Meanwhile registration was already under way for the meet expected to attract some 125 golfers.

Yates Plays Today At West Point

WEST POINT, Ga., July 27.—Charlie Yates, Atlanta's latest golf king, will be the guest speaker at the West Point Rotary Club Thursday. Many out-of-town visitors have been invited to hear the British amateur champion tell of his experiences at Troon.

In the afternoon, on the Riverside golf course in West Point, Yates will participate in a six-some on the Riverside golf course, composed of himself, Lafayette Lanier, Lewis Kirby, Amos Huguley, Frank Williams and Hugh McCulloh Jr.

Jane Cothran's Jinx Beats Me Again--Dot

BILTMORE FOREST COUNTRY CLUB, July 27.—Whatever jinx there is on me playing Jane Cothran is certainly working in by Jane.

Today the beating was to the tune of 5 up and 4 to play. It was the same old story, Jane couldn't miss a putt and played beautiful golf. She was out in 36 with a putt—just rimmed the cup on the ninth for a 35.

I was hitting my shots just fair. I thought for a while on the back nine that I might win some holes but that was quickly settled when on the 14th Jane chipped out of a sand trap and sank the putt for a four and the match.

All of the favorites came through. Eliza Cox lost to Marion Miley, 6 and 5. However, Eliza played fine golf after being in the tennis tournament yesterday for she shot the first nine in 40.

How she can play tennis and golf at the same time is beyond me. Kathryn Hemphill won her match and plays Mrs. Nebblett tomorrow. There will be quite a few good matches in the morning so I suppose I will be a spectator and see how it should be done.

I felt right sorry for my caddy today for he was the one who caddied for me last year and he was really working hard trying in vain to help the ball in the cup, but it couldn't be done. —DOROTHY KIRBY.

DAFFY TRIES FARM CURE FOR AILING ARM

Paul (Daffy) Dean is a disconsolate figure as he divides his weight between a cultivator and a hoe while contemplating his baseball future. Dean believes that he finally has found a cure that will restore the effectiveness that was his when he was a St. Louis Cardinal hero in 1934 and 1935. It is hard work on his farm near Dallas. Paul has enjoyed some success since leaving the Houston Buffs for the Dallas Steers, and says that his arm never felt stronger. Daffy hopes to go back up next year.

Hemphill Wins Over Helen Smith, 7-6; Mrs. J. C. Wright Beaten; Mrs. Nebblett Winner.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 27.—(AP)—Jane Cothran, slender sharpshooter from Greenville, S. C., eliminated Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, 5 and 4, in the opening round of match play today in the Biltmore Forest women's invitation golf tournament.

Miss Cothran, who defeated Miss Kirby in the finals last year, went into the lead at the second hole, turned six up and closed out the match on the 14th with a sub-par brand of golf.

Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., whose two-over-par 80 won the medal yesterday, eliminated Helen Smith, of Greensboro, N. C., 7 and 6. Sally Guth, of St. Louis, considered a tournament dark horse, overwhelmed Mrs. Ellis C. Baum, of New York, 9 and 7.

Merion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., the southern champion, went into the second round on a 6 and 5 victory over Eliza Cox, of Asheville. Allene Hoover, of Thomasville, N. C., defeated Mrs. J. C. Wright, of Atlanta, 6 and 4.

Mrs. Alberta Nebblett, of Atlanta, edged out Joe McCann, of Montgomery, Ala., 3 and 2, and Mrs. John Degner III, of Charlotte, N. C., vanquished Mrs. R. E. Wilson, of Asheville, 1 up, in a see-saw match. Marion Gayer, of Charleston, S. C., eliminated the veteran Deane Van Landingham, of Charlotte, 4 and 2.

Tomorrow's second round pairings: Hemphill vs. Nebblett, Miley vs. Degner, Guth vs. Cothran and Hoover vs. Gayer.

WILMER ALLISON ROUTS JOE HUNT IN GREAT UPSET

Parker, Riggs, Other Favorites Advance; Bitsy Plays Kovacs Today.

By J. F. McEVROY.
SEA BRIGHT, N. J., July 27.—(AP)—Two seeded performers fell by the wayside today as the men's field in the fifty-first annual Sea Bright invitation tennis tournament marched into the quarter-final round.

Defending Champion Bobby Riggs and Frank Parker and Bitsy Grant who are rated behind him in the draw were still in the thick of the fight for the championship, but Joe Hunt and Hal Surface, fourth and fifth in the seedings, were eliminated. The sixth seeded player, Don McNeill, dropped out of the competition Monday with an ankle injury.

Hunt was battered into straight-set submission by the veteran Wilmer Allison, while Surface bowed before the steady stroking of Robert Harman.

Alice Marble, who has lost only four games against three opponents, paced the women's field into the semi-final round. Joining her were Dorothy Bundy and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, who were seeded behind the defending champion, and Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco. Miss Wolfenden continued her upset journey by downing Mrs. Carolin Babcock Stark, 7-5, 6-3.

KOVACS BEATS SUTTER.
Sidney B. Wood Jr., former Wimbledon champion, took the measure of Robert K. Kamrath, of Austin, Texas, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, while Elwood Cooke, who meets Parker tomorrow, downed George Tooley, of Miami, Fla., 6-4, 6-3. Landy Frank Kovacs, Oakland, Cal., star, qualified to meet Grant by humbling Ernest M. Sutter, of New Orleans, 6-2, 6-3.

Riggs overcame Gerard (Jeff) Podesta, of Montclair, and Princeton University, but was carried to an extra set, 4-6, outstayed Riggs to take the second, 7-5. Riggs' power and Podesta lost it, 6-0.

Parker trailed one game to four in the first set of his match against Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., and Rice Institute, before he got down to business. Playing with machine-like precision, Parker ran out the match at 4-6, 6-3.

Gilbert A. Hunt Jr., of Washington, carried Grant to three sets before yielding by scores of 3-6, 10-8, 6-2. Both players were near exhaustion at the finish because of the heat.

Allison never gave Joe Hunt a chance as he employed a smashing, volleying game behind a raking service. The scores were 6-1, 6-4. Allison meets Wood tomorrow.

HARMON TRIMS SURFACE.

Harman beat the curly-headed Surface, 6-2, 2-6, 7-5, by using the same tactics that worked so well against Hare in the second round. Tomorrow the University of California player is paired against Riggs.

Miss Marble won easily over Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., 6-0, 6-1, yielding only the sixth game of the second set to her outclassed opponent. She met Miss Wolfenden Friday.

Miss Bundy, who outstayed Patricia Cumming, of Westfield, N. J., to win 7-5, 6-2, on the right to face Mrs. Fabyan in the other semi-final. Mrs. Fabyan outstayed Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, by scores of 6-2, 6-3.

In the men's doubles, Riggs and Grant advanced to the semi-finals by whipping Cooke and John McDiarmid, 2-6, 6-4, 7-5, while William and Chester Murphy polished off Tooley and Gardnar Mulloy, 6-3, 8-6. Wood and Joe Hunt overcame Sutter and Gilbert Hunt, 6-4, 6-3, as Parker and Hare beat another Chicago brother combination, John and Chester Shostrom, 6-2, 6-2.

Crackers Trim Barons, 5 to 3, To Sweep Four-Game Series

LEAD WIDENED TO SIX GAMES; PELS, VOLS LOSE

Atlanta Opens Four-Game Set With New Orleans Today.

BIRMINGHAM, July 27.—Atlanta's league-leading Crackers swept a four-game series with the Barons by taking the final game here tonight, 5 to 3. The Crackers lengthened their lead to six full games as the Pelicans lost to Chattanooga and Nashville dropped a twin bill to Memphis.

The Barons got to Lefty Tom Sunkel for 9 hits and Durham for one, but they were well scattered. The Crackers secured nine hits, but bunched them enough to score one in the first and fifth innings, two in the seventh and another in the eighth.

Sunkel was effective in the clinches with exception of the trouble he was into in the eighth when Durham went to his rescue. Manager Paul Richards figured in all of the scoring, batting in two runs and scoring two. Twice he walked, was sacrificed around and came in on timely singles by Mauldin and Hill.

FAIL TO SCORE.

Atlanta could not do anything with a scoring chance in the first. Higbe walked Bolling and Hill after one was out and then made Rose hit into a double play.

The Crackers and Barons plucked a run each in the second. Mailho singled to right and went to third when Peters dropped a hit back of second. Mailho scored on Richards' bounce to Thompson.

Socko Glynn tripled into center and came home on Thompson's single to left. Thompson took second on a wild pitch and Lipscomb threw out both McDougal and Higbe.

Sunkel stifled the Barons' threat in the third. Bluege led off with a single and stole second after one was out. Scott drew a base on balls and Howell hit into the 11th double play of the series for the Crackers.

CRACKERS HAVE IT.

The Crackers had it and the Barons didn't in the fifth and the league-leaders moved out in front. Richards walked after Higbe had him "struck out." Sunkel sacrificed him to second and Mauldin came through with the clutch blow, a single down the third base line scoring Richards. The table was set for a pair of Barons runs in their half of the fifth. Higbe walked and Bluege sacrificed him to second. Clancy pulled up at second, when Rose dropped his

REDS LOSE PAIR TO BEES, 1-0, 5-1; PIRATES WIN, 4-2

McFayden, Fette Handcuff Cincy; Dodgers Trim Cubs.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. The St. Louis Cardinals bombarded Clyde Castlemann for seven runs in the sixth inning yesterday, in a rally featured by Don Padgett's homer, to whip the Giants, 7 to 0, behind Lon Warneke's fourth-hit pitching. It was the Giant's fifth straight setback.

Chasing away the jinx which haunted them throughout the western trip, the Boston Bees took both games of a double-header over the faltering Cincinnati Reds. McFayden winning the opener, 1 to 0, and Fette the nightcap, 5 to 1. The Reds collected five hits in each of the games.

Floyd Young hit a homer and drove in three Pittsburgh runs, giving the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-2 victory over the Phillies. His second-inning single scored Arky Vaughan and his fourth-inning home run put Al Todd across ahead of him. Vaughan scored the fourth run in the ninth on Young's infield tap.

By the grace of a couple of enemy errors and Tuck Stainback's pinch single, the Dodgers scored three runs in the ninth to change what appeared a shutout defeat into a 3-to-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs. A near-capacity crowd of 34,414 turned out for the night tilt.

By losing, the Cubs lost a chance to climb into second place in the National league, and were left a half-game behind the New York Giants. The defeat ended their four-game winning streak.

With one out in the ninth, Bryan walked Buddy Hassett, Dolph Camilli singled, and when Augie Galan fumbled the ball, the Brooklyn Dodgers had runners on second and third. Bill Jurges then booted Cookie Lavagetto's grounder, and both runners scored. Durocher singled Lavagetto to third and Stainback brought him home with his hit.

By losing, the Cubs lost a chance to climb into second place in the National league, and were left a half-game behind the New York Giants. The defeat ended their four-game winning streak.

HANK PASSES BABE'S PACE

Big Hank Greenberg banged out two home runs yesterday—his 32d and 33d—to go ahead of Babe Ruth's great record in 1927. It was in 1927 when the famous Babe hit his record of 60. Ruth made his 33d circuit that season in the 95th game. Greenberg's number 33 came in the 88th game of the current campaign, although both sluggers reached that total on July 27.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Steve Sundra, rushed in as relief pitcher in the sixth inning, pitched hitless ball over the last 2-2-3 innings yesterday and hit a homer for what proved the winning run as the New York Yankees nipped the Browns, 7 to 5, in the first game of a double-header. Lou Gehrig also hit a homer.

The second game was rained out.

Hank Greenberg drove in five runs with his thirty-second and thirty-third home runs of the season as the Detroit Tigers slugged out a 9-to-4 victory over Washington in the second game of the series here.

Greenberg's present circuit clout pace is ahead of Babe Ruth's when he set his record of 60 in 1927. Ruth made his thirty-third four-bagger that year in the ninety-fifth game of the season on July 27. Greenberg's thirty-third came in the Tiger's eighty-eighth game of the current campaign.

Boston and Chicago were also rained out.

Cleveland's second-place Indians stayed a game and a half behind the New York Yankees by outlasting Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics in a wild slugfest, 12 to 11. The teams made a total of 25 hits.

Newman T Meet Dalton in North Georgia Diamond Finals

ATLANTA'S ACES AND CARROLLTON ARE ELIMINATED

Grant Park Team Bows, 12-11, in Seven-Inning Contest.

CARROLLTON, Ga., July 27.—Newman and Dalton will meet Thursday at 2:30 for the North Georgia Junior Baseball championship and the right to meet the Augusta Batley Post team in a series for the state title.

Newman defeated Grant Park Wednesday, 12 to 11, to advance to the final round. The game was called after the seventh inning to allow the next game to start.

The Aces made seven runs in the second off one hit to run up a 7-to-4 lead. The Peaches scored once in the third, and three hits in the fourth netted them five runs. One run in the fifth and one in the seventh completed Newman's scoring.

Hitting rallies in the sixth and seventh frames netted the Aces four runs but left them one short of tying the score. Wild pitching that put 19 men on base proved costly to the Grant Park club. In the Grant Park game nine runs were made in the first one and one-half innings of play with only one hit recorded.

Carrollton's Farmers lost to the Dalton nine, 18 to 2, with Dalton playing errorless ball and the Farmers making seven errors. Robinson, of Carrollton, and M. Caldwell, of Dalton, each gave nine hits.

Entering the second half of the eighth with a lead of 3 to 2, Dalton put the game in a safe place by pushing five runs over the plate.
